VOLUME I. OF

THE CRITICAL ENGLISH TESTAMENT,

BEING AN ADAPTATION OF BENDEL'S GNOMON, WITH NUMEROUS NOTES, SHOWING THE PRECISE RESULTS OF MODERN CRITICISM AND EXEGESIS.

Edited by REV. W. L. BLACKLEY, M.A., and REV. JAMES HAWES, M.A.

THE Publisher is desirous of drawing attention to this important work, the purpose of which is to enable the English reader, with the authorized version in his hand, and without any knowledge of Greek, to understand the precise results of modern criticism in revising the text of the New Testament. It seems strange that the English language has been until now without a book containing this information.

* * * The Critical English Testament will be completed in three volumes, averaging 700 pages each. Books of this class are, as a rule, high-priced, and adapted to the few rather than to the many. But the Publisher means this Book to be an exception, and has accordingly fixed the price at 6s. a volume.

Each volume contains a Memoir, and is illustrated with a Portrait of the Author, engraved on Steel, and numerous full-page Illustrations on Wood, from designs by eminent Artists.

 This Series of Books, from the very superior manner in which it is produced, is at once the cheapest and handsomest edition of the poets in the market. The volumes form elegant and appropriate Presents as School Prizes and Gift Books, either in cloth or morocco.

"They are a marvel of cheapness, some of the volumes extending to as many as 700 and even 900 pages, printed on toned paper in a beautifully clear type. Add to this that they are profusely illustrated with wood engravings, are elegantly and tastefully bound, and that they are published at 3s. 6d. each, and our recommendation of them is complete."—Scotsman.

NOTICE.

"JOSH BILLINGS: HIS BOOK."

An exceedingly droll and humorous work, for which a wide popularity and an immense sale is expected, is now ready, price 1s. in cover, with a mirthful design.

* * For many years past the sayings and comicalities of "Josh Billings" have been extensively quoted in our newspapers. His Humour is quite as popular as the Fun of "Artemus Ward;" indeed many readers will prefer the wild drolleries of "Josh Billings" to the eccentricities of the "delicious Artemus"—as Charles Reade styles the latter. Although promised some time ago, Mr. Billings' "Book" has only just appeared, but it contains all his best and most mirth-provoking articles.

Children's Books, Illustrated.

OUR CHILDREN'S PETS.

BY JOSEPHINE.

This book contains 168 pages, printed on Toned Paper, and is illustrated with 70 Wood Engravings from designs by HARRISON WEIR and others, and is one of the handsomest books issued. Price, in cloth, 5s.; cloth, gilt edges, and full gilt side, 7s. 6d.

The following notice from a London paper may give some idea of the work:—

"This handsome quarto is one of the most attractive children's books we have met with during the present season, or, indeed, any other. It is attractive internally as well as externally, for it is full of charming little stories, sketches, and scraps of poetry, written with the view of instilling into the minds of the young consideration and love for dumb animals. The volume contains a large number of beautiful illustrations by Birket Foster, Harrison Weir, W. Hunt, J. Gilbert, and other well-known draughtsmen. The binding is exceedingly pretty, and, to some extent, quite novel. There is let into the outer lid a charming representation of a redbreast singing to its mate. This is beautifully printed in colours, and highly glazed. It is surrounded by a frame of gold, and looks like a veritable framed and glazed picture, which, indeed, it is, hung on the cover of the book. The young folks will certainly be delighted with 'Our Children's Pets.'"

The Publisher has now a Third Edition ready of

OUR DUMB COMPANIONS.

The book contains 180 pages, printed on Toned Paper, and is illustrated with 75 pictures. Price, in cloth, 5s.; cloth, gilt edges, and full gilt sides, 7s. 6d.

"This is a work of marvellous cheapness, beautifully illustrated by a profusion of well-executed wood engravings. The young will accord a hearty welcome to so handsome a Christmas visitor. The design of the book is obvious, namely, to excite in the breasts of the young kindly feelings towards the brute portion of creation. It is full of most interesting incidents, while it faithfully describes the habits of our dumb companions."—Sunday-School Teacher's Treasury.

"It contains three-and-twenty full page illustrations, one by Sir E. Landseer, seventeen by Harrison Weir, and the remainder by other artists. The anecdotes are told in a very interesting way, and the engravings, large and small, are always appropriate to the text. As a School Prize, or a Christmas book for a boy, there are few books which will be found more charming than 'Our Dumb Companions.'"—Morning Herald.

"A great wit and orator once exclaimed, 'I would rather have written Glover's Song of Hosier's Ghost than the Annals of Tacitus. Give me the writing of a nation's ballads, I care not who writes their laws.' The beautifully illustrated quarto before us is an example of this superior influence of a really popular book, which at once touches the hearts of all who have hearts to touch, over those learned and recondite books, 'which play round the head,' but never awaken our better feelings. The book itself is as attractive in appearance as it is captivating in its contents. Three-and-twenty exquisite full-page engravings after pictures and drawings by Sir Edwin Landseer, Harrison Weir, Andsell, Tayler, and Huard, with numerous vignettes and tailpieces, adorn the book, the paper and printing of which are sumptuous, as a volume adapted and intended as a gift or prize-book should be. Its binding, too, with a rich-coloured medallion in brilliant enamel, of a spaniel's head bearing a scarlet cap, is tasteful and artistic in the extreme."—Morning Advertiser.

Six Hundred and Seventy-two pages, 8vo, cloth boards, with Two Maps, Four Coloured Plates, and Sixty-five Illustrations.

PRICE ONE GUINEA.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"He has done most important service in a rich and neglected field. We have read the narrative with thorough enjoyment."—Saturday Review.

"The volume before us is all alive with Incidents of Israel of the most interesting and exciting character, described in the most graphic language. We can have no hesitation in pronouncing it by far the most important work on the subject that has appeared in this country since the publication of Dr. Robinson's well-known 'Biblical Researches.' In some respects, indeed, it surpasses that masterly work."—Reader.

"The book, which is extremely well 'got up,' and illustrated, is one which an intelligent and thoughtful reader cannot fail to appreciate."—Fortnightly Review.

"Next to Dean Stanley's eloquent narrative of travels in Palestine, we do not know of a more interesting book on the same subject than the one before us, by the Rev. H. B. Tristram. We have no doubt of 'The Land of Israel' becoming what it deserves to be—a most popular book."—Spectator.

"His book is full of intensely interesting matter, and we recommend its perusal as one of the best and most life-like transcripts of the scenery, people, and places of the Land of Israel."—Manchester Guardian.

"Mr. Tristram's work is exhaustive; a credit to himself and to the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, under whose auspices it sees light."—Court Journal.

"By aid of pen, pencil, and photography, we have a book on the Holy Land which is in many respects unique, and in all deserving the careful perusal of the thoughtful and the inquiring."—Book-seller.

"An eminently interesting book of travels, full of lively sketches of the manners, customs, and characters of the races which the author saw, as well as of learned and lucid dissertation on scientific subjects, it is likely to have few rivals."—Evening Standard.

"The result of the labours, explorations, and researches of Mr. Tristram and his friends are of that description, that no library of the Holy Land can afford to be without them; and they constitute altogether the most important work published in reference to Palestine in modern times."—Colburn's New Monthly Magazine.

"Some portions were examined more carefully and leisurely than others: but Mr. Tristram observed them all with the eye of an accomplished naturalist, and his accuracy and fulness in describing the special characteristics of each scene would give novelty and peculiar interest to his descriptions, even if they were not, as they often are, graphic and forcible in giving the general features."—Guardian.

"It is utterly useless to attempt a complete account of a book like this, whose merits lie in the fulness, and multiplicity, and exactitude of detail and observation. It is an admirable book and a fascinating book."—Literary Churchman.

"We have no doubt the book will find its way into most good libraries, and be introduced by the Clergy into their own families, either by purchase or by means of reading societies."—Clerical Journal.

"We have read this book through with intense interest. So that, having gone before him on his journey, and knowing as we do the country, we may assign to his journal the foremost rank among all other books of travel in the Holy Land."—Church and State Review.

"It is excellent in spirit, interesting in manner, and instructive in substance; and we cannot suppose it possible for any one to peruse it without pleasure and profit. Its value will be permanent, and it will be quoted as an authority in the distant future."—Journal of Sacred Literature.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

UNDER this heading we purpose inserting such rare and curious books as Booksellers in one part of the country may find unsaleable in their own locality, but which those elsewhere may be glad to possess. Books overbought, or bought by mistake, may thus be disposed of, but it is not intended for common every-day publications, which may, or ought to be found, in every shop. Without any wish to act the part of censor, it will be the Editor's duty to see that legitimate use is made of this list, and that, as a general rule, only such books are admitted as are likely to be sold by means of this advertisement. The list from each Advertiser must not exceed three books, the titles of which should if possible be each compressed into one line. No charge will at present be made for the insertion.

BOOKS WANTED.

Letters, stating price and condition, to be forwarded to the Advertisers.

No charge being made to Subscribers for inserting a moderate number of "Wants," it is but fair that as little trouble as possible should be given, although some appear to think that they cannot give too much, and others that they cannot possibly write too badly for the printers, nor give too much trouble to the Editor by their orthographical and bibliographical blunders. The following rules should therefore be observed:—1st. No list should include more than five books. 2. The list should be written plainly, in the same manner as the "Wants" are printed. 3. No books which have been advertised for in any other publication are admissible. 4. Catalogues wanted, or Books bearing upon specific subjects mentioned generally, and not by name, or more books than five, must be paid for at the rate of sixpence each article, and stamps sent with the list. 5. Lists must be received by the 25th of the month. 6. The Editor holds himself at liberty to reject or leave out any book or list he may think proper.

 As any infraction of these rules may lead to the rejection of the entire list, and thus cause delay and disappointment, Subscribers are requested to observe this notice.

TRADE AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

TRADE CHANGES.—Mr. Holmes has recently sold the old established Stationery and Book-selling business belonging to Messrs. Catherall and Pritchard, Chester, to Messrs. Phillipson and Golder of the same city. Messrs. Catherall and Pritchard will, for the future, confine themselves entirely to their Photographic business, which will be carried on in the upper part of the old premises. Mr. Lovejoy of Reading acted as Valuer for Messrs. Phillipson and Golder.—Mr. Holmes has also sold the late Mr. Salter's business, Upper Baker Street, to Mr. Beeching, of Dorset Street, Portman Square.—Also Mr.

Smith's business, Harwich, (in same hands 25 years,) to Messrs. Botham and Jackson.—Also Mrs. Spurrier's business, 39, Church Street, Stoke Newington, to Mrs. Coombes.

REMOVALS.—The business of Messrs. Darton and Hodge, Holborn Hill, will in future be carried on at 175, Strand, in consequence of their premises being required for the Holborn Valley Viaduct.

Mr. William Wesley is removing from Queen's Head Passage, Paternoster Row, to 81, Fleet Street, in consequence of the re-building of the premises.

Mr. T. W. Grattan, from 34, Paternoster Row, where the premises are about to be rebuilt, to 9, Warwick Square, E.C.; also Mr. W. H. Broom, from 34 to 28, Paternoster Row.

DERBY.—The business of the late Mr. George Clayton, Printer, Bookseller, and Stationer, is now carried on by his Widow.

Mr. Darkin, founder of the Printers' Almshouses, and for five-and-twenty years its active secretary, has, in consequence of declining health, retired from that post. At a meeting of the Committee of the Printers' Almshouses, held at Anderton's Hotel, a subscription was opened with the object of presenting Mr. Darkin with a substantial mark of their approval of his long and valuable services.

Among the numerous publications lately issued by Messrs. Day and Son, are several of surpassing beauty in chromo-lithography, illumination, and printing in colours. We would draw especial attention to their new monthly magazine, entitled "Nature and Art," which is exquisitely illustrated in various styles of lithography and wood engraving. At a first glance the pictures, representing various forms of natural objects, landscapes, figures, architecture, &c.—would seem to hold the most prominent place in this elegant work; but on a nearer inspection, we find the pictures accompanied by letterpress of a really superior order, whether the subject matter be scientific or literary, archaeological or critical, descriptive or poetical, grave or gay. It is wonderful how so handsome and valuable a book can be produced in shilling numbers. Another of the works by the same firm is the "Fine Arts Quarterly Review," a new series of which is now being issued. No. I. for June contains various papers by competent writers on Sir Joshua Reynolds and His Times, the Cartoons of Raphael, the principal rivers of Asia Minor, Doo's Raising of Lazarus, the recent acquisitions by the South Kensington Museum, the Graphotype process, Lady Eastlake's History of our Lord, Thomas's Wedding of the Prince of Wales, Berlin Photographs, the additions lately made to the pictures in the National Gallery, &c., in most cases amply illustrated by wood engraving and lithography, with an exquisite illumination of the Coronation of the Virgin, after Fouquet, by way of frontispiece.

The second volume of "Nimmo's Popular Tales," contains a dozen well-told stories from as many pens. The first of them, entitled the "Ten of Diamonds," is a novelette of considerable merit, and the rest provide just the sort of reading in which travellers, by rail or steamboat, never fail to delight—pointed, brief, and interesting.

The first Volume of the Working Man, published by Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin, being now completed, the numbers of the second Volume will be published on Saturdays, at the reduced price of one penny. The publishers promise that the new Volume shall faithfully record and review all important affairs of the week, and distribute useful information on new and important subjects, and its leading object will be the enlightenment, advancement, and well-being of the great masses of mankind. A large map of Europe will be presented to every purchaser of the new Volume, to illustrate the record of the progress of the War which will appear in the Working Man.—The same firm have also issued Hudson's New Arithmetic for School and College Use.

Messrs. Bradbury's "Handy Volume Shakespeare," seems admirably adapted for the pocket or the knapsack, and its issue proves that the public demand for the works of our great national bard is by no means satisfied. The first volume contains the "Tempest," the "Two Gentlemen of Verona," and the "Comedy of Errors"; nicely printed in a clear readable type without notes, from a comparison of the texts of Collier, Dyce, and Charles Knight, the most erudite of modern editors.

The sixth series of the monthly issue of "Church Stories," entitled "Our Curate's Budget," from the press of Messrs. Parker, contains half-a-dozen well-written stories, worth reading, irrespective of their special purpose.

Messrs. Abel Heywood and Sons have issued another dozen of their Penny Guide-Books. Chatsworth, Harrogate, Scarborough, Buxton, and The Isle of Man, are among the most interesting of this new Series.

Messrs. T. Nelson and Sons publish a pretty Series of English Views of some of the most interesting sites in England and Wales. They are almost printed in colours, for the skies are blue, and the clouds are golden, while terra firma and all things upon it are printed in warm tints. There are a dozen views in each portfolio, accompanied with descriptive letterpress, and the price is a shilling. The entire Series promises to be very comprehensive, including the old abbeys and castles of England, the Crystal Palace, the Isle of Wight in five series, the English lakes, &c.

Messrs. Smith and Elder have added Florence Dawson's pretty tale, "An Old Debt," "Uncle Crotty's Relations," by Herbert Glyn, to their "Monthly volumes of Standard Authors;" which series has now reached the respectable age of forty.

To "Cassell's Topographical Guides," have lately been added the Counties of Sussex and Surrey; both well and carefully compiled, and handsomely illustrated with maps and numerous wood engravings. To those who are unfamiliar with Horsfield's "County History of Sussex," and Cartwright's Edition of Dallaway, Cassell's Guide will prove very useful and interesting.

Messrs. Sherriff & Downing, of Sydney, have forwarded the "Australian Almanac, for 1866." This useful work has now been issued annually for seventeen years, and each succeeding publication is an improvement on its predecessors. From it we learn that the emigration to the Australian colonies rose from 32,191, in 1849, to 87,881 in 1852, the year of the gold fever, then it gradually declined to 23,738 in 1861; rose in 1862 to 41,843, and in 1863, the last year for which the figures are complete, to 53,054. During the last twenty-three years, the British government have sent 276,837 emigrants to Australia, in addition to many thousands assisted by private societies. These and like statistics, make the "Australian Almanac" one of the most interesting books of the season.

The "Sydney Directory" has reached its sixth year of publication, and is now a good thick presentable volume, constructed upon the plan familiar to us in "Kelly's Post Office Directory." The book is got up in a style which reflects great credit on its printer, Mr. F. Cunningham, and its publishers, Mr. John Sands, of Sydney, and Messrs. Sands & M'Dougall, Melbourne.

"Chapman's Gazetteer of the Province of Auckland" has reached a second edition. Beside a large number of places strange to English eyes, the work contains an excellent map, and a short key to the pronunciation of native names and the spelling of words in the Maori language.

BOOKS IN AMERICA. The New York World in speaking of popular books says, "The circulation of books of a certain class, mostly bearing upon the late war, exceeds anything ever before witnessed in this country, with the exception of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and a few of our most popular school books. One of these publications, the scribblement of a woman who, we believe, was a hospital nurse, or something of the sort, has already netted a large fortune for its publisher, who circulated it through women agents. We forget the exact circulation of Mr. Greeley's unfinished work on the war, but it was very large. Of two later works which, like that, are sold only by subscription, 'Sherman's Campaigns,' and Coppée's 'Life of Grant,' it is within our knowledge that fifty thousand copies of the former were sold in four months, and twenty thousand of the latter in about half that time, which suggests the reflection that the next best thing to being a military hero is to be the publisher of his exploits. It would be curious to trace the sale of such works, since it would enable us to form an estimate of the mental proclivities of the people of the different States. That they circulate but little in our great seaboard cities we take for granted, from the fact that the matter they contain was long since made known to us by the papers of the day and the bulletins of the hour; besides, we are tired of wars and rumours of wars, and seek forgetfulness and amusement, some in the last new novel, others in magazines and periodicals, and others at the theatre and opera. In the country, where these things are not, it is different. The interior of New York is said to be a rich field for peripatetic venders of war books; also the region west of the Alleghanies. They are, likewise, beginning to venture a little in the South, chiefly along the edges of the border States."

Weather Casts and Storm Prognostics. (Routledge, 1s.) To those who wish to become weatherwise, this volume will prove very useful, for it contains a digest of the meteorological science of the latest investigators; with numerous remarks that will commend themselves to sailors, travellers, farmers, anglers, gardeners, and others. The subject comes home to all; for, whether it concerns the fate of an Australian packet-ship like the London or the destruction of a lady's bonnet, the signs of the heavens, the fields, and nature generally, can scarcely be neglected in a land like ours, with its proverbially changeable and uncertain skies.

The Sunday Scholar's Tune Book. (Sunday School Union.)—Contains a large number of psalms and hymns, arranged for both the old and the tonic sol-fa notation, in various styles and metres, well adapted for school exercises.

The Chemistry of Common Things. By Stevenson Macadam. (Nelson & Sons.)—Forming a volume of "Nelson's School Series," the treatise is designed to give pupils and teachers a good general idea of the nature and chemical constituents of the atmosphere, the plants in ordinary use for culinary and medicinal purposes, the animals we use for food, the philosophy of cookery, the relations existing between animal and vegetable life, the formation of soils, rocks, earths, &c., and the various remarkable changes that are daily going on in the world we live in: altogether a very useful volume, formed on the model of Johnstone's "Chemistry of Common Life," but by no means a copy or réchauffé of that well-known work.

MAPS OF THE SEAT OF WAR.—The Germano-Italian War is rapidly making its mark on the literature of the day. In addition to the accounts of "Our Own Correspondents," and various pamphlets devoted to the political aspect of affairs between Austria and Prussia, the publishers are rapidly issuing authentic maps of the several states involved in the miserable quarrel. Several of these maps are now before us; and as it is impossible to award the palm of excellence to any one especial map, or set of maps, we will take them in alphabetical order. Messrs. Black have produced a shilling map of the Germanic Confederation, with a smaller chart of Europe and a key-map, showing the situation of Germany and Italy with regard to the countries surrounding them; the whole marked in colours distinguishing state from state.—Messrs. Cassell have also issued a series of maps of the seat of war, under the title of the "War Atlas," comprising Italy, Austria, Germany, and the countries involved, or likely to be drawn into the struggle; the whole is a well-printed, half-crown volume.—From Messrs. Cruchley we have maps of Venetia and Lombardy, showing all the fortifications, railways, roads, &c.; Prussia, Saxony, Silesia, and parts of Hanover and Bavaria; and a new map of central Europe, in which the theatre of the war is very distinctly shown, each properly coloured.—Messrs. Letts and Son have issued the first of a series of maps of the same countries, intended as companions to the newspapers, with a number of gemmed dots—green for Austria, red for Italy, and blue for Prussia, by means of which the progress and whereabouts of the contending armies can be marked day by day; a most ingenious contrivance.—Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons have issued sixpenny and shilling maps of Prussia, Austria, the German States, and Northern Italy. Their printing, colouring, and general get-up is excellent; and they possess the further advantage of cheapness.—Messrs. Philip & Son have also published shilling maps of Prussia, Northern and Southern Italy, the minor states of Germany, &c., elegantly printed, and, so far as we can judge, accurately defining the positions of the contending powers.—Messrs. Smith & Son have also published war maps of South Germany and Venetia, North Italy and Venetia, and North Germany.

The Annual Register for 1865 (Rivingtons).—This thick, handsome volume, containing a "review of public events at home and abroad" for the year 1865, cannot fail to be useful to politicians and statisticians. It is divided into two parts: the first is devoted to English and foreign history, with a retrospect of literature, art, and science; the second to a chronicle of remarkable occurrences, an obituary of eminent persons, accounts of notable trials, and an appendix, containing a digest of the public documents and state papers on the Cattle Plague and the Insurrection in Jamaica. In addition to all which there are given—finance accounts, promotions and appointments, list of the Queen's ministers, the British and Foreign Ambassadors, the new House of Commons, the Sheriffs for England and Wales, and the winners of university honours. The obituary is hardly so full as it might have been, and the section devoted to remarkable trials might also have been judiciously enlarged.

The Oratorical Year Book for 1865.—Alsagar A. Hill. (F. Warne & Co.) The idea of this book is excellent. It is a collection of the best cotemporary speeches uttered in Parliament, at the Bar, and on the Platform, during the past year, arranged and edited by Alsagar A. Hill, barrister-at-law. It takes nearly five hundred closely printed pages to contain the most conspicuous speeches of the year; among which are several by French and American orators. Most of the speeches here gathered together were to be found only in the columns of the daily newspapers; and nearly every one must have experienced the inconvenience and great loss of time incurred in obtaining any particular speech a few weeks, or even days, after its delivery. There is an advantage also in being able to read these Oratorical Essays free from the excitement that attended their delivery. Most of those in this collection will bear the test of calm reading, and afford a clear exposition of the political and general opinions of the time.

As a matter of course, the book sparkles with eminent names.—Gladstone, Disraeli, the lamented Palmerston, the Earl of Derby, Sir G. Grey, Mr. Bright, the Rt. Hon. S. H. Walpole, Lord Stanley, Mr. J. A. Roebuck, Rt. Hon. E. Cardwell, Rt. Hon. R. Lowe, Rt. Hon. Lord Westbury, Mr. J. D. Coleridge, the Emperor of the French, M. Thiers, Abraham Lincoln, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Jefferson Davis, and many others. It is proposed to publish a similar volume annually, and, doubtless, this is the first of a long series as indispensable to the historian and scholar as the Annual Register, and probably more immediately interesting. To young men whose profession may call them into the field of oratory, this book will be found exceedingly useful; they may select their models from it, and study the various points of view from which most of the important questions of the day are regarded.

Notes on Epidemics. By F. E. Anstie, M.D. (Jackson, Walford, & Hodder).—Dr. Anstie has done well to expand and republish his valuable articles in the "British Quarterly Review." Epidemic disease, especially in the form of typhus, has for a considerable time past engaged the attention of medical men; and the author, observing its prevalence in the neighbourhood of Westminster Hospital, to which he is senior assistant physician, has endeavoured to obtain such an intimate acquaintance with its forms and peculiarities, as will furnish the means necessary for its final extirpation. He declares that no mistake can be more serious in its consequences than the error of regarding the growth of infectious disease as a matter of mere local or personal interest. Wherever the conditions of life are unwholesome, there epidemics find a congenial home; and he strongly reprobates the supineness of boards, vestries, and local authorities for allowing the existence of disease without a strenuous effort to isolate and cut it off at its root. He reproves that "habit of overweening confidence in the powers of local self-government," which has given over the sanitary control of our streets and houses to sets and coteries of ignorant and obstinate parish officials, and calls upon the wise and thoughtful to examine the causes and prevent the effects which contribute to and follow this shameful neglect of sanitary measures." To meet and check the mischief, "requires," he says, "a national effort; but until the nation understands the elementary facts in the history of preventible disease, its efforts will be wasted." That which is happening in the low slums of Westminster, Whitechapel, and Mile End, is happening also in every place where similar causes of epidemic exist. To make the public acquainted with the real danger that exists, and the steps that may be taken to remove it, Dr. Anstie has published this valuable treatise; and with a view to prepare for, and possibly mitigate, the cholera which is expected to attack us next autumn, he advocates, as a temporary and immediate expedient, the appointment of a royal commission, to be followed by the establishment of a permanent and thoroughly efficient sanitary organization, not only for the metropolis but for the entire kingdom.

A Glimpse of Oriental Nature. By a Lady. (Dean & Son).—There are pictures of birds, insects, flowers, &c., common to Ceylon, with descriptive verses, both printed in chromolithography. We learn, from the preface, by the Chaplain to the Forces, that the authoress, having been for many years shut out from the ordinary pursuits and pleasures of life, amused the leisure she could steal from sickness, by transferring to her sketch-book various portraits of natural objects. The idea naturally occurred that what had given her so much delight would not be without interest to others, especially the young. Hence the present volume, which is handsomely produced, and well worthy the study of the curious. Many of the forms delineated, such as the stick-insects, the walking leaf, and the Indian fly-catcher, are very curious; the brilliance of their colours being admirably shown.

The Fruit Manual. By Robert Hogg, LL.D. Office, 171, Fleet Street.—This work, which was commenced nearly a quarter of a century ago, now appears in a new and thoroughly revised edition, containing a great variety of information useful to gardeners and amateur pomologists. To the names and descriptions of the various fruits suitable for cultivation in English orchards and gardens, are added lists of the best varieties. Thus we learn that there are, at least, fifty kinds of grapes which will bear abundantly in our hot-houses and greenhouses, and no fewer than ninety that will succeed in the open air.

The Billiard Book.—Capt. Crawley. (Longmans & Co.) This is an exhaustive treatise on the popular game of Billiards. The subject had been well handled by the author before, but Billiards is a progressive game, rapidly improving, and striving to attain perfection. The author is, as every author of such books ought to be, a thorough enthusiast; and has worked hard at his pleasant task with head, hand, and heart. The book is both elementary and practical; and the perfect novice, by giving due attention to the instructions, may speedily become an adept. Even the veteran player may learn something useful from these pages. Billiards is now regarded as a science; at any rate, the mathematician has stepped up to the billiard-table with his doctrine of chances and his laws of motion, and, at least, imparted a degree of dignity to the game which it never enjoyed before.

The Billiard Book is, as we have said, an exhaustive book, and there does not seem to be another word left to say on the subject until some unlooked-for improvement appears. Moreover, the volume is not only occupied with Billiards, but also with other kindred games. Pool, Pyramids, American Billiards, Carline, the Spanish or Skittle Game, the Sausage Game, Cramp Games, &c. The volume is got up in admirable style, profusely illustrated with plates and diagrams; and it may be said that Billiards has now for the first time made its appearance in a guise that entitles it to a place on our library shelves among works of the most solid character.

JULIUS CÆSAR.

History of Julius Cæsar. 8vo. Vol. II. The Wars in Gaul. (London: Cassell, Petter, and Galpin.)

THIS second volume treats of that period in the life of Cæsar which extends from the time when he assumed his government of Gaul to the supreme moment of his fate, when, reduced to the alternative of keeping himself at the head of his legions and disobeying the Senate, or giving himself up to his enemies, he resolved, by crossing the Rubicon, to go whither he was "called by the prodigies of the gods, and the iniquity of his enemies." The events of this period, comprehending the two descents of the Great Captain upon Britain, and the bringing its inhabitants into first communion with civilisation, are of cardinal interest to all Englishmen. They are those, moreover, with which we are already familiar. The war in Gaul has been so admirably related by the chief actor therein that the imperial biographer, bearing in mind the laudatory words of Cicero, and convinced by investigation of its rigorous accuracy, has digressed as little as possible from the narrative left us by Cæsar himself. He has, it is true, sometimes changed the order of the matter, more than once abridged passages containing superfluous details, and occasionally enlarged those requiring elucidation; but in the main, the story told in these pages is the old story, familiar from early days to every educated man in Christendom. It is, therefore, less to the historical part of the Emperor's labours than to the conclusions at which he arrives on events, and on men's motives and actions, that the interest of the work chiefly attaches. In a word, it is upon the opinions of the politician, and not upon the dissertations of the archaeologist, that the attention of most readers will assuredly be directed during their examination of the volume. It must not be denied, however, that great practical results to the early history of France have attended the researches and explorations that have been undertaken by command, and with the personal superintendence, of the Emperor. The sites of important events have been determined, the boundaries of tribes ascertained with as much exactness as it is now ever possible to arrive at, and illustrations of the arts, and arms, and manufactures of the people have been collected which, if they throw little new light upon Gaulish manners and customs, considerably augment the light hitherto existing. Everything that bears on the subject—encampments and earthworks, coins, gems, inscriptions, weapons (offensive and defensive), objects of personal use and adornment—seems to have been collected with much trouble, and examined with great care; and, by consequence, our stock of information has been considerably enlarged, not only in minute particulars, but in very important respects. The labours of predecessors have advantageously been consulted, and information has been derived, as might be supposed, from numerous learned men whose studies have lain in the same direction, and who were gratified in being able to communicate the result of their labours to one who happens to be at once a fellow-worker and a powerful sovereign. Altogether the great opportunities that naturally belong to a writer occupying the author's lofty position have been nobly used, and we know of no similar work that has appeared of late years which more deserves careful study than that portion of this life of Cæsar which has reference to the war in Gaul.

With respect to the account here given of the two invasions of Britain, we are unable to speak in unqualified terms. We differ from the author as to the port of departure (Portus Itius), as to the localities assigned to certain events described in the "Commentaries," and as to the rendering of more than one of the passages that describe the campaign in the interior. In rejecting the claims of Wissant, Calais, Etaples, Mardyke, and giving to Boulogne the distinction of being the Portus Itius, the imperial author seems to have been influenced as much by the fact that Napoleon I. in his Précis des Guerres de Cæsar, "has not hesitated in preferring Boulogne," as by his belief that this port alone answers the requirements of the text. It would be tiresome and quite out of place for us to discuss this question in these columns. By expressing our belief that the Emperor has erred in taking into consideration the present capacities and configuration of the port, and has lost sight of the fact that the nautical and practical conditions of the coast have undergone great changes since the night when Cæsar first started on his hazardous expedition, we indicate the course our arguments would take. With respect to the places he had named as the point of disembarkation on our own shore, we thoroughly coincide with him in fixing upon Walmer. Nor do we find any statement or conclusion in the narrative of the first descent with which we can reasonably differ. The date of departure from Gaul, the state of the tide on the arrival off Dover, the manner of the landing, and the account of the fight which followed, as given in this volume, will meet with the assent of the vast majority of those who have given attention to the subject and studied the data on which the conclusions of the author rest. In composing his account of the campaign which followed the second descent, however, the Emperor seems to have relied upon testimony less trustworthy than what he derived from the surveys and excavations made under his directions for the elucidation of the wars in Gaul. Some mistakes are of a very trivial character; others, as the statement and inference which occur in a foot note (p. 231), illustrating Cæsar's march towards the Thames, are of more importance, inasmuch as they might be rectified by personal inspection. In the statement to which we have alluded, we are told that on St. George's Hill, near Walton-on-Thames, no camp ever existed. In reply we can affirm that a well-preserved camp has existed there from time out of mind; that about the date of the publication of this volume it was actually seen there, and that we have every reason to believe it exists there still. But, as we have said, it will be to learn the views of the most successful politician in Europe on events identical, as he conceives, with what has occurred or are occurring in France, and not to discover such points as the exact spot where Cæsar crossed the Thames, that most readers will consult this life.

The moral of this volume is identical with that of its predecessor. "When Providence raises up such men as Cæsar, Charlemagne, and Napoleon, it is to trace out to people the path they ought to follow; to stamp with the soul of their genius a new era; and to accomplish in a few years the labour of many centuries. * * Happy the people who comprehend and follow them; woe to those who misunderstand and combat them." Brutus and his fellow-conspirators in putting an end to the schemes of Cæsar, were frustrating the schemes of Providence, Cæsar and Providence were, in fact, identical at that particular juncture. The reasoning upon which this assumption is founded appears to us to be extremely futile; or, in view of the political parallel obviously attempted to be established, let us say it is singularly disheartening to the modern Augustus. If the defenders of the Republic were criminal in opposing Cæsar because, as the event shows, Providence had decreed that the Republic should give place to Imperialism, the emperors were afterwards criminal in opposing the barbarians, inasmuch as the event shows Providence had decreed that Rome should fall a prey to the homeless creatures that were hovering over the empire. The hordes that followed Alaric and Attila might have argued precisely in the same way as the French Emperor argues in these volumes. Imperialism was keeping them from their destined possessions, and the sooner it made way for them the better for itself and the world.

THE BOOKSELLER IN AMERICA.

It is unfortunate that most Englishmen visiting the United States land at New York, and thus receive their first impressions from a city having no character especially its own. On landing from the packet the visitor finds himself in the hands of a parcel of low car-drivers and hangers-on, and probably finds that the easiest way of passing through the Custom House, is to pay the officer appointed to examine his baggage a handsome sum to pass it quickly. This done, and crossing from where Messrs. Cunard have landed him, he sets foot upon a shore reminding him of Amsterdam and Rotherhithe, a sort of combination of the two; and after walking a few hundred yards he emerges upon Broadway, the street of New York, said to be nearly six miles long. Here he finds himself in a bustle and confusion equal to that of Cornhill, but it is no Cornhill or Cheapside; there is so strong a dash of the New Cut, or Leather-lane element, that he cannot mistake it for one of the well ordered and well kept streets of the City of London. The post and even the kerb-stones are covered with placards; each shopkeeper appears entitled to about three feet of the pavement nearest his house, and this he raises a few inches, and in some instances as much as two feet, above the other part of the pathway, his next neighbour keeps his portion quite level, while the third has an open trap-door on his portion. Near the kerb-stone the shopkeepers have the right of placing boxes of dust and rubbish, or a kind of watchbox, on which he is permitted to have the further privilege of placing bills and advertisements; over these again there will possibly be found a street telegraph. The roads are most execrably paved, full of holes and dirt, and in muddy weather scarcely passable. At the present time New York is suffering from two epidemics, building improvements and fires; every night there is a fire in Broadway or one of the adjacent streets, and every day some fresh house or houses are being pulled down, the pavement in front pulled up, and huge piles of bricks, reaching as high as an ordinary first-floor, placed in the roadway. The older houses are of brick, and of the ordinary English character, with French open blinds added. Trees are freely placed in the streets, not with the regularity of a French boulevard, but as though some Hollander had been trying to make a new Bomgee; this adds a very pleasing appearance to the city. The new houses and stores are palaces, mostly built of or faced with white marble, they have a very imposing appearance, although but little can generally be said of the architects' taste. On paper the designs no doubt looked pretty, but there is a want of harmony and proportion that sadly offends the eye.

New York is called the "Empire City," and well deserves the name; its position as a mart of commerce is unrivalled, and there is no doubt that it will always occupy the place it has attained. For a long time the race lay between New York and Philadelphia, but the latter city has succumbed, and now rests satisfied with the second place. In one respect it takes the lead; New York is Cosmopolitan, Philadelphia is American. The Irish, German, and mob elements, although powerful in every American city, have less predominance there; they are annoyances in Philadelphia, but are not powers. In no city in the world is the middle-class element more powerful than in Philadelphia; and as this may be considered the ancient cradle of book-making and publishing, we may tarry awhile to glance at the city and its doings.

Philadelphia, fortunately for itself, was planned and partly laid out by men some hundreds of years in advance of their age; it is the most regularly built city in the world, and consists of numerous main streets in parallel lines crossed at right angles by others. The main street is Chestnut Street; to the left of which are Walnut and Locust Streets, to the right are Market and Arch Streets. These are crossed by First, Second, Third, and other streets, every street as it is added being regularly numbered. In the houses again there is the same kind of regularity, the even numbers being on one side and uneven the other, consequently after the stranger has once mastered the main plan of the city there is no difficulty in finding his way. He perhaps has a direction given him, say 20 20, Green Street; he takes any street till he strikes Green, and then proceeds till he reaches twentieth, ten houses on his left hand he finds 20 20. He asks his friend the question, where do you live? the reply is thirty Cherry —, Street being supposed, but never mentioned.

After Philadelphia had been planned it must have been peopled by emigrants from Brock or some other marvellously clean Dutch village, for there can be no doubt that it is the cleanest city in the world. The foot pavements are of bright red brick, placed zigzag fashion, and kept well washed. The washing is done systematically. In Holland, where a somewhat similar fashion prevails, the frau never thinks of commencing her ablutions till her neighbour has nearly finished, so although No. 1 may have commenced at six o'clock in the morning, No. 12 will not begin till past ten, and as a necessary result, the clinkers are always wet and frequently dirty, the washings of one house soiling the next. Here, you never see any one at work, all the washing being done late at night or early in the morning. The door-steps, window-sills, and frequently all the lower part of the houses, are of white marble; the doors and shutters are painted white, which contrasts finely with the red walls and pavement, and all is kept scrupulously clean. An English servant is satisfied if she cleans the centre of the stair or floor; here the corners are also looked to. The cleanliness of the place, the brick pavement, the trees by the side of the pathway, and the extent of many of the houses, keep up the Dutch delusion, and the traveller may almost fancy that he is wending his way along the Heenen or Kaizergracht, and expect every minute to see the canal, but none appears; instead of canals he sees street railways, and in place of barges sees large cars drawn by two horses.

Wiser than their London friends, the Philadelphians welcomed the street railways; they were laid down at the expense of different companies, and the Philadelphians fitted their axles and wheels to the width, and now everybody who drives makes use of the rails.

Philadelphia was formerly the literary emporium of the United States. Matthew Carey was one of the earliest booksellers. He was an Irish refugee, a man of some property, and of good education, a gentleman in fact, who mixing in the politics of the period, found it necessary to leave Ireland; he settled in this city and founded the business which is now in the hands of his grandson, Mr. Henry Carey Lea, one of the most intelligent booksellers in the world, one who is not merely a seller, but in his own proper person a maker and designer of books. But Philadelphia is rich in intelligence. Messrs. Pennington & Son not only have a large store of books but know their insides; their shop is the resort of readers. Here also is Mr. Brotherhead, the Mudie of America. Mr. Brotherhead is a Yorkshireman, and is also an author. Mr. E. H. Butler, like Mr. Carey Lea, a maker and designer of books, as well as a bookseller. Messrs. Lindsay & Blakiston, medical publishers. Mr. Desilver representing one of the oldest publishers in the city; also many others; so that Philadelphia at the present day holds no mean place in the intelligence of the world.

The largest house in the book trade in Philadelphia, and perhaps in the United States, is that of J. B. Lippincott & Co., in Market Street, a marble-fronted building with 40 feet frontage, and a depth of no less than 215, but this, large as it is, will shortly be increased by some buildings in the rear being added, and then the entire depth of each floor will be about 400 feet, a depth which will astonish those who have been accustomed only to the sight of London establishments. The founder of this business was Mr. Grigg, a Cornishman, who had at different times been a shepherd, sailor, lawyer's clerk, wool-buyer, linen-draper, shopman, and eventually clerk and assistant to Benjamin Warren a bookseller of Philadelphia. After Warren's death Grigg was thrown out of employment, and in 1823 commenced business as bookseller on his own account. After a while, finding the business increase, he took a Mr. Elliott into partnership, and subsequently admitted their clerks Henry Grambo, Edmund Claxton, and George Remsen into partnership, and the five continued as Grigg, Elliott & Co. till 1850, when Mr. Grigg retired, and was succeeded by Mr. Joshua Ballinger Lippincott, then a large bookbinder in the city, the new firm trading as Lippincott, Grambo & Co. Mr. Lippincott's joining the firm gave a fresh impetus to the business; Bibles, Prayer Books, and Photographic Albums were added; arrangements were made with Messrs. Chambers, and other British publishers, and the business has now become the largest in the country. Much of the credit and success of the house is due to the energy and intelligence of the junior members of the firm, who each have the management of separate departments. Mr. George Remsen entered the business as clerk in 1828, Mr. Edmund Claxton in 1833, Mr. J. B. Mitchell, Mr. C. F. Haffelfinger, and Mr. John A. Remsen more recently. Messrs. Lippincott are not merely publishers, they are wholesale booksellers also, or, as they are called in this part of the world "book jobbers," and from January to July in the present year have sent out to booksellers in every part of the Union, from Maine to California, nearly 19,000 cases of books, an increase upon 1865, as in that year their total number reached but 15,549.

The store of the American Sunday School Union in Chestnut Street is perhaps the largest floor in the world, devoted solely to books; from front to back it stretches no less than 238 feet in one unbroken length. Although an abundance of books may be found in the various stores in the city, there is still a want of energy on the part of booksellers here; they allow a good deal of business to slip through their fingers, and there is no doubt that an energetic and intelligent New Englander, with a nicely assorted stock of new cloth books, with a choice variety of handsomely bound ones also, would obtain a large trade. It is to be regretted that book-selling did not offer sufficient attractions to Mr. G. W. Childs, who has left it for a more profitable line of business. The history of this gentleman is instructive, and we are indebted to the "Round Table" for the following sketch from the pen of Dr. Shelton Mackenzie.

"Mr. Childs, a native of Baltimore, now about thirty-seven years old, came to Philadelphia at the age of fourteen, and entered the bookstore of Mr. P. Thomson. He continued there for four years, when, though not of age, he began business on his own account in a small place, corner of Third and Chestnut Streets—one half of the office in the great building now occupied by his own cashier and assistants in the business management of the Public Ledger, of which he is now proprietor. At that time, nearly twenty years ago, he had made up his mind to own the Ledger, and frankly stated his determination to the proprietors. He never once abandoned this purpose, and the writer of this article has frequently heard him speak of it, years before he succeeded in realizing it.

"In 1849, being then in his twenty-first year Mr. Childs was admitted into partnership with Mr. Robert E. Peterson. Soon after the firm became Childs & Peterson—a nominal change, for the partners were the same; the principal business management was undertaken and successfully executed by Mr. Childs. The first book they published was 'Peterson's Familiar Science,' of which 200,000 copies have been sold. It was adopted, in 1851, as a text-book in the public schools of Philadelphia and also of Brooklyn. It was based upon a book, written by an eminent English scholar, which was not well adapted for this country in many points, and was defectively arranged. Mr. Peterson, a gentleman of high culture, made the necessary alterations and additions, and succeeded so well that the Rev. Dr. Brewer, author of the book, warmly thanked him for the improvements, and publicly signified his approbation thereof. In successive editions the book has been made to keep pace with the most recent discoveries in science, and there has latterly been incorporated with it, as a suitable appendix, occupying 150 pages, Professor Pepper's 'Scientific Amusements for Young People.'

"Being a personal friend of Judge Kane, Mr. Child obtained a promise from him that should

Dr. Elisha Kent Kane return from the Arctic regions (whither he had gone on a second exploring tour to discover traces of Sir John Franklin and his crew), and write a book, he—Mr. Childs—should publish it. Dr. Kane did return, wrote the book, and Childs & Peterson published it, selling nearly 70,000 copies within a year, and paying a royalty of one dollar on each copy. They subsequently purchased the stereotype plates of the 'First Grinnell Expedition,' by Dr. Kane, improving it by the addition of many new illustrations, a fine steel portrait of Franklin, and sketch of his life by Mr. Allibone. The three volumes of Kane's 'Arctic Explorations' were attractive from the interest of the subject, the adventurous humanity of those who designed and carried out the search after Franklin, and, in a literary point of view, for the earnest simplicity of Dr. Kane's journals. The numerous illustrations, too, from Dr. Kane's own designs, were valuable; those on wood were engraved by Van Ingen & Snyder, and those on steel, consisting of finished views by Mr. James Hamilton, the eminent marine painter, from other sketches by Dr. Kane, were executed under the superintendence of J. M. Butler of Philadelphia. The work is still in demand—the more so, perhaps, because the author died, a martyr to humanity and science, not long after the publication of the second and concluding journals of his 'Arctic Explorations.' Uniform with this publication was a splendidly illustrated volume, 'Brazil and the Brazilians,' by the Rev. J. C. Fletcher, who had been United States chaplain at Rio Janeiro, and for a time, acting secretary to the American legation there, and assisted by the Rev. Dr. Kidder, long a resident in Brazil. Of the first edition of this costly work, 5,000 copies were sold.

'Bouvier's Law Dictionary,' of which the twelfth edition, revised and much enlarged, is now in the press, was another successful publication, on which 40,000 dollars have already been paid for copyright.

"Mr. Childs suggested and planned Judge Sharswood's edition of 'Blackstone's Commentaries,' two volumes royal octavo, with very valuable notes, emphatically the American edition, which is now a text-book in all the law-schools of the United States. He planned and published 'The National Almanac and Annual Record,' and edited the first volume for the year 1863. This is a work of great merit, on account of the accuracy and great fulness of its statistical information. A forthcoming work, on which he has spared no expense, also undertaken at his suggestion and on his pecuniary outlay, is Lossing's 'Illustrated History of the Civil War,' in the preface to which the author warmly acknowledges his obligations to Mr. Childs. Indeed, that gentleman's relations with his authors have been uniformly agreeable, for he never has had dispute or difficulty with any of them, and retains their friendship to this day. One of them, certainly, ought to feel grateful to Mr. Childs—we allude to the present governor of Tennessee—for whom, in kindness, he published 'Parson Brownlow's Book,' which, by great and inexplicable good luck—for it has small literary merit—obtained a great sale, and put 20,000 dollars into its author's pockets when he was a fugitive driven by force out of his own state.

"The magnum opus of this firm, however, is Allibone's 'Dictionary of Authors,' more accurately to be named as 'A critical dictionary of English literature, and British and American authors, living and deceased, from the earliest accounts to the middle of the nineteenth century, containing upwards of thirty thousand biographies and literary notices; by S. Austin Allibone, LL.D.' Of this, the first volume, pp. 1,006, super-royal octavo, complete from the letters A to J, inclusive, has been before the public for some time, and there is every prospect that the second and concluding volume will be published this year. It is all that it professes to be, and a great deal more. Dr. Allibone, much to his credit, dedicated this great work to his publisher, George William Childs, 'who has greatly furthered my labours by his enterprise and zealous and intelligent interest.'

"In 1860, Mr. Peterson retired from the firm, and Mr. Childs entered into partnership with J. B. Lippincott & Co., a business connection which continued for less than a year. Mr. Childs then commenced business, by himself, at Nos. 628 and 630, Chestnut Street. In May, 1863, he purchased the Publishers' Circular and American Literary Gazette, which had been published at New York as a mere advertising sheet, but which, entirely remodelled and edited with great care in every department, has become acceptable and appreciated in foreign countries as well as in this. Its Parisian correspondence, giving a large and agreeable variety of literary news, anecdotes, biography, and gossip, is full of spirit and breadth.

"On the 3rd of December, 1864, Mr. Childs, fulfilling the long-cherished ambition of his life, purchased the goodwill of the Public Ledger, a daily journal with a very large circulation and a most extensive and lucrative advertising connection. The former proprietors retired upon a fortune estimated at 5,000,000 dollars. In the purchase were included the entire 'plant' of type and steam-presses, and a weekly entitled the Dollar Newspaper. Mr. Childs has improved as well as enlarged the Ledger since it passed into his hands, and thereby considerably increased its circulation. It is judiciously and ably edited, and has carefully avoided the publication, in peace as well as in war, of sensational news. The Dollar Newspaper, considerably augmented in size and improved into a good family paper, is now widely circulated under its new and more appropriate title of the Home Weekly; and the American Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular, published twice a month, has a respectable and remunerative circulation, with no small influence among publishers and purchasers. The job printing office connected with the Ledger is very large and highly remunerative from its great business. Mr. Childs continues as book publisher at Nos. 628 and 630 Chestnut Street, but is about erecting a building, 84 by 180 feet, on the south-west corner of Sixth and Chestnut, near the State House, at a cost of about 500,000 dollars. To this the publication office of his three journals will in due time be removed. Exactly one block more westwardly, also on Chestnut Street, the proprietor of the Press had established his printing and publication office six months ago, and the Evening Bulletin is also removing westward.

"As a publisher, Mr. Childs has shown tact, enterprise and liberality, and everything he has put his hand to seems to flourish. In fact he is prudent as well as bold, never putting his hand so far forward that he cannot safely withdraw it when and how he pleases."

FRANCIS MAHONY—FATHER PROUT.

Another sparkling light of literature has just gone out. Above two months ago, the Reverend Francis Mahony, so widely known by his soubriquet of Father Prout, died at Paris (where he had resided several years as the correspondent of the Daily News and Globe Newspapers) before he had quite attained his grand climacteric of appointed years (63). If a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, we can suppose how a wit and a humourist might write though disguised under the most inappropriate epithets of "Reverend" and "Father." In social life indeed, there was as little of the reverend in Father Prout, as could be imagined; and in the shape of paternal relations, it may be presumed that the title belonging to his religious faith rendered the other cognomen morally inapplicable. At any rate, though I knew him intimately, I was never practised upon by any dogmatic opinions, and never heard of any nursery tales among his very various literary productions. Excepting celibacy, perhaps, there was not the slightest symptom of the Roman Catholic priesthood in his conduct or conversation, and in fact he had, at an early period, been estranged at least from the trammels of the Church for the service of which he was educated in France and Rome; and whatever connection might endure between him and it, was a mystery not ostensible to the outer world! At the end, his death is described as ceremoniously attended by its rites and profession; so that it might be said he died in its bosom, and almost in the odour of its sanctity.

Cork, in recent times (without disparaging the antecedent) has been distinguished by the talent of its natives in literature and the fine arts; and Mahoney was not one of its least conspicuous ornaments in the former department. On the contrary, he was a comprehensively read scholar, and as a humourist, a master in irony, somewhat satirical or rather sarcastic, but untinged by a shade of bitterness or ill-nature. His subdued but scornful laugh at the bustling, busy beings of inferior class vapouring around him, was characteristically expounded by his calling them "industrious fleas;" and he certainly indulged in no small degree of contempt in estimating the merits of not a few of his contemporaries, who ranked themselves much higher than they reached by his reckoning. Whatever was the cause of his leaving the Church and adopting literature as a profession, the mystery was complicated by the freedom with which he often spoke of the former, as if to cover some concealed reality by resorting to an opposite extreme; and this again, was contradicted by his acceptance of the office of guide or tutor, in which capacity he accompanied several eminent youths of the Romish persuasion in travels throughout Europe, and many parts of Asia and Africa. It seemed as if he were in this way, doing the work of the impenetrable tribunal he had repudiated.

Yet to all semblance he was completely a man of the world. An admirably acute observer of mankind; his mind stored with a prodigious amount of miscellaneous information; with a kindly heart and a sound judgment; a safer adviser than Father Prout was not to be found within the widest circle of friends; and truly it might be quoted of him in the famous line of his countryman—

"Still the wonder grew

How one small head could carry all he knew."

Having taken up the pen as the provision for livelihood, he devoted himself assiduously to its use, and his talents speedily raised him into popular notice and success. The scenes and colloquies of Watergrasshill were redolent of keen remark and entertaining illustration. Some examples of his writing approach nearer to the sarcastic play of Voltaire, than is (in my opinion) to be found in any other contributor to the periodical press of the day, although there is no lack of very clever persiflage in some of the leading organs of public intelligence. Quick, racy, and largely informed, Prout's "articles" were much above the more level order; and gave point to many a truth, and threw light upon many an error. When we consider what an amount of absolute genius was thus expended through the course of years, we cannot but regret that in such a case as his, the desultory drain absorbed and swallowed up all the continuous outpouring flow, and that no concentration brought such inexhaustible ability to a focus to create an imperishable impression on society, and bequeath it as a memorial to future times. This, however, is the fate of all that numerous class who, blessed, more or less, with the gifts of intellect, are doomed to waste their efforts in the performance of (no doubt) very valuable services to humanity, but never even to earn a name, or be honoured with the thanks of their fellow men. Yet their diffusion would be a glory, could its rays be brought together into one bright luminous confluence to antonish and electrify as well as to please and illuminate the world. The vast majority are limited to bread, and must not dream of fame; and even the few of the higher powers have to maintain a severe struggle against the dissipation of a force of infinite effect were it exercised under more auspicious circumstances. Thus it would be difficult fairly to measure what such a writer as Father Prout has done, and impossible to conjecture what he might have accomplished!

A judicious selection of his contributions to Fraser's Magazine and other periodicals, made by a competent hand, if such yet remains of the ephemeral band, most conversant with the secrets therein wrapt up, might do much to vindicate the memory of Francis Mahony to posthumous celebrity; but for this brief notice it must be enough to say that he was generally esteemed by all who came into co-operation with him, and that there never was an individual in his position more ready, more willing, nor more kindly and liberally disposed to lend a friendly lift to his comrades and fellow-toilers in the far and widespread fields of literary cultivation.

OBITUARY.

On the 7th of May, at the Bookseller's Provident Retreat, Abbot's Langley, at the ripe age of seventy-six, Mr. Samuel Maynard, formerly mathematical bookseller at Earl's-court, Leicester-square. Mr. Maynard was deeply versed in Mathematical Bibliography, and a good mathematician besides. He edited Bonycastle's Arithmetic, Algebra, and Mensuration, and prepared Keys to the same, and also a Key to Bishop Cosenso's Arithmetic, and gave other proofs of his ability. Mr. Maynard was greatly respected by the trade, and his death makes another gap among the patriarchs of bookselling.

On the 13th of June, at 185, Camden-road, London, N.W., aged seventy-nine, John Cumberland, Esq., well known as the editor and publisher of "Cumberland's Plays."

On the 17th of June, at 41, Regent-square, aged seventy-one, Mr. Alexander Black, formerly of the firm of Black, Young, and Young, Foreign Booksellers, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden.

NATURE AND ART,

ILLUSTRATED BY CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHY, PHOTO-LITHOGRAPHY, AND WOOD ENGRAVING.

AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY.

HIS new Monthly Periodical will be essentially pictorial. The subjects for treatment will be chiefly drawn from the beauties and curiosities of NATURE AND ART. In the Artistic Department, no pains will be spared; and it is believed that the illustrations in CHROMO- and PHOTO-Lithography, for which the publishing Firm have so wide a repute, will offer a feature as attractive as it will certainly be novel. The lovely hues, for instance, found on birds, insects, and leaves, being faithfully rendered by the former of these processes, may give fresh stimulus to that taste for closely observing natural objects which has of late years been wonderfully developed; while subjects hereafter mentioned, whose representation or illustration demands accuracy of form rather than of colour, will offer a wide scope for the employment of the latter agency.

In the LITERARY DEPARTMENT, the Proprietors of the Magazine have already secured the co-operation of artists, naturalists, sportsmen, travellers, and literary men of recognized ability and position, while they look with confidence to receiving most interesting communications through their widely spread connections in all parts of the world.

The many spirited sketches and highly interesting descriptions of wild and romantic scenes by officers on foreign service, which are frequently placed at the disposal of the Publishers, assure them of a class of correspondents enjoying peculiar opportunities for observing Nature.

A portion of the text will embody popular Essays on SCULPTURE, PAINTING, and SCIENCE, illustrated also with coloured sketches or drawings. The Editor has accepted an admirable series of articles, especially interesting to Artists, on WILD FLOWERS and the localities they inhabit, and another on DRAWING, from its most rudimentary principles, which, while so illustrated as to please the general reader, will supply a course of really sound training in form and colour to the student, and thus lend the Fine-Art Department of the Magazine an educational value in addition to its ordinary one.

A special department will comprise a series of practical hints by an accomplished professor for the direction of students interested in forming collections, and in noting the phenomena of NATURAL HISTORY.

ORIGINAL ARTICLES on Fine-Art Topics of the day, Reviews, and regular Reports on ART-PROGRESS at Home and Abroad, will find their place in this Magazine. DECORATIVE ART in its higher branches must prove a fertile subject, and one which the resources at their service will enable the conductors to treat prominently; and these same resources may be no less available, should occasion offer, to assist in guiding the Art labours of the boudoir and the work-table.

The opportunity for ADVERTISING in its most attractive form, which will be afforded in the columns of "NATURE AND ART," is likely to be most acceptable to the high-class trades (especially to those connected with art or sport), both on account of the wide circulation confidently anticipated, and of the important decorative facilities and proficiency known to be possessed by the Publishers.

Communications for the Editor to be addressed to the care of

FINE ARTS QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Edited by B. B. WOODWARD, Esq., Her Majesty's Librarian and Keeper of Prints and Drawings at Windsor.

HIS periodical was established to meet the requirements of collectors, connoisseurs, and all who are interested in the cultivation of the Fine Arts. It treats of Art in general, but more particularly of the Arts of Design—Architecture, Sculpture, Painting, and Engraving; of Photography, so far as it is employed as a substitute for Drawing and Engraving; and of Industrial Art.

The illustration of the History of Art, and of its various schools, from original monuments and records; and of the lives of Artists of every country—but particularly of our own—with their works, are its chief object; subordinate to which is the historical and critical description of Galleries, Collections, and Special Exhibitions of Works of Art; and of Buildings, Sculptures, Pictures, &c., deserving separate notice.

Important works on these subjects are reviewed at length; and all publications relating to them, whether English or Foreign, together with recently-published Engravings, are periodically noticed.

Practical improvements in the materials and processes employed in the Fine Arts; in the methods and appliances of Art-Instruction; and in the application of the Arts of Design, are fully described.

Each Number will contain notices of all events connected with the Fine Arts.

Illustrations, in various styles of Engraving, and in Photography, are given whenever they are required.

The Title, Index, and Dedication to H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, for Vol. III. of the FINE ARTS QUARTERLY REVIEW will be given to the Subscribers, on application to DAY & SON (LIMITED).

A Glimpse of Oriental Nature. By a Lady. With Preface by the Rev. G. R. Glegg, Chaplain-General to Her Majesty's Forces. Handsomely bound (4to crown), full gilt, 21s.

"This is the production of an invalid lady, who has whiled away the hours of her forced inactivity by drawing and painting subjects of natural history. She has chosen most interesting objects, and with the design, we should presume, of giving the dweller of a northern clime a just idea of the exact appearance of insect life and vegetation in the East, where she some time resided. To see these things in their dead state in the cases of a museum conveys but a shade of the reality to the mind. We are surprised, as we see them depicted in this book, at the beauty of the colours of the insects, and their peculiar appearance on leaf and branch. We never could have imagined their natural appearance from what we have seen before, and in the case of rare species, nuts and seeds, which are here coloured, with the full freshness of nature upon them, of course it would be quite impossible to realise the aspect without such aid as this. No one would be much the wiser as to the appearance of a nutmeg growing by turning over that wooden-like article in the hand, and looking it up afterwards in the equally wooden plates of a botanical work. We are not exaggerating in saying the book contains an importation of a slice of Oriental nature as it exists. We only wish that our praise may induce the invalid to give us more and abundantly, and that it may gratify her to know that from her couch she can instruct the world, the grown-up world, though she dedicates her pencil's work, with unnecessary depreciation of her talent, to the younger branches of society."—Court Journal.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

UNDER this heading we purpose inserting such rare and curious books as Booksellers in one part of the country may find unsaleable in their own locality, but which those elsewhere may be glad to possess. Books overbought, or bought by mistake, may thus be disposed of, but it is not intended for common every-day publications, which may, or ought to be found, in every shop. Without any wish to act the part of censor, it will be the Editor's duty to see that legitimate use is made of this list, and that, as a general rule, only such books are admitted as are likely to be sold by means of this advertisement. The list from each Advertiser must not exceed three books, the titles of which should if possible be each compressed into one line. No charge will at present be made for the insertion.

BOOKS WANTED.

Letters, stating price and condition, to be forwarded to the Advertisers.

No charge being made to Subscribers for inserting a moderate number of "Wants," it is but fair that as little trouble as possible should be given, although some appear to think that they cannot give too much, and others that they cannot possibly write too badly for the printers, nor give too much trouble to the Editor by their orthographical and bibliographical blunders. The following rules should therefore be observed:—1st. No list should include more than five books. 2. The list should be written plainly, in the same manner as the "Wants" are printed. 3. No books which have been advertised for in any other publication are admissible. 4. Catalogues wanted, or Books bearing upon specific subjects mentioned generally, and not by name, or more books than five, must be paid for at the rate of sixpence each article, and stamps sent with the list. 5. Lists must be received by the 25th of the month. 6. The Editor holds himself at liberty to reject or leave out any book or list he may think proper.

 As any infraction of these rules may lead to the rejection of the entire list, and thus cause delay and disappointment, Subscribers are requested to observe this notice.

TRADE CHANGES AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

The continuation of "The Bookseller in America;" some biographical notices of recently deceased members of the trade; correspondence; notices of books, and other matters of interest are standing over for next month in consequence of the pressure upon our advertising pages.

Messrs. Strahan & Co. have issued a notice to the trade, that having acquired greatly increased accommodation at Ludgate Hill, through the purchase of the lease of several houses in the rear of their premises, Mr. Strahan has removed back to Ludgate Hill, and that the books published by him, and the magazines published by Strahan and Co., will be supplied together.

Messrs. Walton and Maberly are removing their wholesale business from Ivy Lane to Upper Gower Street.

Messrs. Lothian and Co. have removed from Ave Maria Lane to No. 3, Amen Corner.

Messrs. Willis and Sotharan, of the Strand and elsewhere, have dissolved partnership, Mr. Willis retiring from the business in favour of Mr. Sotharan, who will continue it as heretofore.

Mr. Holmes informs us that he has recently sold Mr. Harris's business, Manchester Terrace, Kilburn, to Mrs. Salter, late of 45, Upper Baker Street, Regent's Park. Also Mr. John Milton's business, 120, St. John's Road, Hoxton, to Mr. Carter, late of Richmond Place, Brighton.

Mr. Bennion, of Market Drayton, has recently opened a branch business at Sandbach in Cheshire.

WARWICK.—Mr. C. F. Blackburn, in addition to his second-hand book shops at Brighton and Leamington, has recently opened a third in this town.

COVENTRY.—Mr. Wm. Curtis, who for several years has managed the business of Mr. Stone in this city, has commenced on his own account as a bookseller and stationer, and in conjunction with Mr. S. G. Beamish as a printer and book-binder also.

In the present day, those schools bear the greatest reputation where the pupils can learn most in the shortest time, and for this purpose the best books are required. But which books are the best? is a question easily asked, and not so readily answered. Every new book is supposed to supply some want or requirement, and in many instances does so. Every teacher has some method of teaching peculiar to himself, and requires those aids by which he can best communicate his knowledge to the pupils, and thus a book which suits one person fails in the hands of another; hence the number of new educational works which every year make their appearance. Even yet we believe that the science of education is barely understood, and that many of those books now in use will be superseded by better.

Our duty has been to bring before our readers those lists which are issued by the publishers most largely engaged in providing educational books, and this number of the BOOKSELLER will be found to contain advertisements of nearly all the best books published in this country. In preparing these books, the best energies of authors and publishers have been taxed to the utmost, and if the amount of capital embarked in this branch of business could be ascertained, it would be found larger than most persons would believe.

We can do no more this month than record the decease of Mr. George Henry Virtue, late of Amen Corner; Mr. Thomas De La Rue; Mr. Thomas Delf; Mr. William Hookham Carpenter; Mr. Melville Fletcher, of St. Andrew's, N. B.; Mr. James Haycraft, of Manchester; Mr. W. Pearson, of Wigan; and Mr. W. J. Sackett, of Birmingham.

THE GLOBE LIBRARY.—Some time since Messrs. Macmillan issued a new and elegant edition of Shakspeare, and gave it the name of the "Globe" edition: it was, as it deserved to be, a great success, and the "Globe" edition is now to be found in every part of the world. One would think that having coined a new name for an edition it became the property of the coiner, and that if he followed the Shakspeare with a "Globe" Milton or Spenser, the name would be his; but it appears not, for we observe that another publisher announces a "Globe" Library of Poetry, Romance, History, &c. We regret to see this appropriation, and believe it to be entirely unnecessary, for any publisher of taste can have no difficulty in creating a new title for a good series of books.

Disraeli's Curiosities of Literature.—This is literally one of those books "without which no gentleman's library can be complete," and we are glad to see a new edition issued at a cheap rate; but why two editions should come out at the same time from different publishers is one of those things that no editor can understand. That issued by Messrs. Routledge is printed in a beautiful small type, in double columns, and is to be completed in six shilling parts. That of Messrs. Warne, "the only authorised edition, with notes," is edited by the present Chancellor of the Exchequer, and has a steel plate portrait of the author. It is to be completed in ten shilling parts, printed in large type.

THE AUTHOR OF "ECCE HOMO."—This remarkable work has reached a tenth edition in this country; two rival editions have appeared in America, one, an elegantly printed book, published by Roberts, of Boston, has reached us; it bears the words "eighth thousand" upon the title-page. The authorship, however, remains undiscovered; but we believe that we shall not be very far from the mark when we guess that he will probably be found in the editorial chair of a London newspaper, and that he formerly edited a Review which we regret to say is now discontinued. In early life the gentleman in question was a Unitarian, closely connected with a celebrated literary family of that denomination; later in life his views became more advanced while his faith contracted, but more recently he has attached himself to the Church of England, and will be frequently seen attending the ministry of the Rev. F. D. Maurice. If this guess prove correct, many of our readers will have no difficulty in recognising the writer of "Ecce Homo" by the above description. To the new edition a fresh preface has been added, in which the author replies to some objections and adverse criticisms.

NEW SERIES OF CLASSICS.—Messrs. Rivington announce that they have in preparation a new series of Classical Authors, edited by members of both Universities. The best texts will be given, also a brief English commentary, and instead of long quotations from other editions, references will be given to points of interest therein, thus leaving room for the elucidation of the text itself. A goodly array of editorial names is given, and the first volume is promised in the early part of the forthcoming season.

The Educational Guide.—Under this title Messrs. Dean and Son have published a little volume, by Mr. R. H. Mair, containing a large amount of information relative to schools and school teaching, the law as it affects teachers and pupils, and a large number of hints that cannot fail to be useful to the scholastic profession.

From an advertisement in the present number, it will be seen that the well-known series of Catechisms, known as Blair's and Wilson's, will in future be issued by the original projectors and publishers, Messrs. Darton and Co.

The catalogue recently issued by Mr. Dodd, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, is interesting as coming from a bookseller, descended from one of the tradesmen who kept shop on the Old Bridge, Martin Bryson, who was succeeded by the Charnleys, and now after the lapse of more than a century by Mr. William Dodd. The catalogue contains some books of ballads and other works interesting to collectors in any part of the country.

Women of History. (Edinburgh: Nimmo.)—As a companion volume to the Men of History, this work will provide many readers with facts gathered from various and recondite sources. It does not pretend to be original, for its biographies are taken from the writings of Plutarch, Gibbon, Hume, Grote, Carlyle, and other less-known historians; but the plan on which it is founded is an admirable one. In its pages we get portraits of the most celebrated women painted in the language of the best writers. Among the "Women of History" here noticed are Sappho, Cleopatra, Joan of Arc, Lady Jane Grey, Madame de Maintenon, Anne Boleyn, Mary Wortley Montagu, Hannah More, Marie Antoinette, Anne Seward, the Empress Josephine, Felicia Hemans, Miss Edgeworth, Charlotte Corday, and Madame de Staël. The arrangement of the biographies is chronological; in many respects a better plan than merely alphabetical classification.

Chambers's Miscellaneous Questions. By W. Chambers. (W. & R. Chambers.)—The questions contained in this volume are in all cases followed by answers, given in brief but satisfactory terms. For instance, "What are hibernating animals? Those which pass the winter in a secluded and dormant state, of which the bat is an example: the term hibernati is from the Latin hiberno, I winter." In like manner answers are given to questions in geography, geology, ethnology, language, chronology, and various branches of art, science, and literature. This useful work is designed as a companion to the "Historical Questions," by the same author; and the two together, form an admirable study for pupils just getting through the elementary courses of ordinary school education, and especially valuable for self-teachers of all ages.

Dictionary of recent and living Painters. By H. Ottley. (H. G. Bohn.)—Fourteen years ago Mr. George Stanley revised, enlarged, and continued the well-known work "Bryan's Dictionary of Painters and Engravers;" and now Mr. Ottley, a gentleman who has a considerable knowledge of art, has produced a supplementary volume which was intended to include biographical and critical notices of various modern artists who have made their names and works familiar to the public. The book is in many respects valuable; for Mr. Ottley, with the assistance of the publisher, has gathered together a great variety of interesting data concerning living or lately deceased artists. The editor claims credit for "little beyond the recognition due to industrious and judicious compilation;" but a little more industry, and the exercise of rather more judgment, would have greatly improved the book, which is by no means free from sins of omission and commission. It would be easy, had we space and leisure to devote to such a task, to justify our remarks; as it is, however, we content ourselves by expressing a hope that Mr. Ottley will profit by the suggestions of his critics, and render a future edition less open to objection. We are the more inclined to believe that this will be the case from a paragraph in the Publishers' notice:—"The present volume must be regarded only as an instalment of my intentions, and will, with all convenient speed, be followed by another, supplying whatever may be found deficient." Among the deficiencies we may mention the ineffective notice of Cruikshank and his works; the entire absence of all mention of the Boddington and Meadows families of painters, and the want of balance between the space accorded to the various artists introduced. For instance, we cannot understand the policy of giving eighteen lines only to an account of Her-ring, the animal painter, and twenty-five lines to a consideration of the works of Solomon Hart, R.A., and Professor of Painting to the Royal Academy, while over three columns, or three hundred lines, are devoted to Seymour, the caricaturist, and two columns to Bridell, the landscape painter. All these shortcomings will, we presume, be amended in the next issue.

Twelve Months with Frederika Bremer in Sweden. By Margaret Howitt. In 2 vols. (Jackson & Walford.)—The youngest daughter of William and Mary Howitt had the privilege of spending a year with the celebrated Swedish novelist in her northern home; and the two volumes before us give an interesting account of what that home was, and with what dear friends and sympathizing neighbours the good old lady was surrounded. "Miss Bremer," says Mrs. Howitt, in the graceful preface she has written to her daughter's work—"was a representative woman, known and honoured in every civilized country for her literary labours. In her own land, however, although she ranked very high as an authoress, she yet took higher rank as a reformer and philanthropist. . . . She was especially the helper of her own sex. . . . For children she was an indefatigable labourer, and was felt and was acknowledged to be the centre around which moved every effort for their well-being, whether physical or moral. . . . She loves to have the young about her, and entered with genuine delight into all their pleasures and pursuits, never growing weary of thinking for them, or of devising schemes for their happiness or improvement. . . . Diffusing happiness around her, not talking religion, but cheerfully and faithfully living it, and finally when the time of removal came, leaving behind her a bright track which many will follow." In this diary, Mrs. Howitt's daughter presents us with numerous brightly-touched pictures of home-life in Sweden; never, however, violating the sanctity of private life, but giving her impressions of what she saw and heard with a freshness and vivacity that are really charming. Though the volumes are not "illustrated" in the usual sense of that term, they are adorned with photographs of Miss Bremer and the Queen Dowager of Sweden, as well as with several characteristic sketches of people and places, neatly engraved on wood. As a contribution to the biography of this well-known and universally-admired writer, these volumes have their own especial value.

THE INFANT'S MAGAZINE.

BY THE EDITORS OF THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND.
Profusely Illustrated. Published Monthly. One Penny.

"The INFANT'S MAGAZINE supplies a want that most mothers must have felt for their very little ones—something that can be understood by the smallest capacity. We have tried it upon an intellect of two years and a half, and found it most successful."—Worcester News.

"For adaptation to the thoughts and feelings of childhood, we have seen nothing to be compared with the INFANT'S MAGAZINE. It is, indeed, a triumph of its kind—so delightfully happy in its tendency, and bristling with pictorial illustrations so exquisitely appropriate."—Berwick Warbler.

"The INFANT'S MAGAZINE is a most tempting work for children. The woodcuts are first-class productions, and the tone which pervades the matter introduced is instructive, and precisely adapted to youthful minds."—Gravesend Journal.

 A MAGAZINE

CONTAINING MATERIALS READY FOR USE.

The "TREASURY" is the only Magazine of its kind. It is purely Evangelical in its teaching, and has had a large circulation for several years among Superintendents and Teachers in Schools connected with all Denominations.

The following outline of Contents will show that the Treasury forms an invaluable Book of Reference for all persons interested in Sabbath School work, or in any way engaged in the religious instruction of the young. It contains 48 pages, divided into ten sections, as under:—

1. Leading Articles—on various systems of teachers; plans for the management of Schools; and other important subjects.
2. Readings in Biography—in which the Life and Characters of eminent Men and distinguished Teachers are portrayed.
3. Scripture Illustrations—being clear and simple Expositions and brief Comments on Scripture Types, Figures, Emblems, &c. (exceedingly useful to a Teacher.)
4. Lessons for Infants.—In this section four lessons, prepared expressly for the very little ones, are given in detail each month.
5. Lessons for Junior Classes.—These lessons (four in number) are adapted for scholars from eight to twelve years of age.
6. Lessons for Senior Classes.—In this section four lessons are inserted, prepared with special care, for the Bible classes.
7. Outlines of Addresses.—This section is intended to assist Sunday-School Visitors and others who have occasionally to give an address to the whole school.
8. Teachers in Council.—This is a favourite section of the Magazine. It contains an account of a Monthly Meeting of Teachers (the Editor presiding), where all questions suggested by the readers of the "Treasury" are fully discussed. Through this medium, Teachers in all parts of the country correspond with each other, and communicate facts and ideas on any subject connected with their work.
9. Reviews and Critical Notices.—Here the Editor gives an impartial judgment on all works of an Educational character.
10. Miscellaneous Gleanings.—Poetry, Anecdotes, Similitudes, &c., adapted to illustrate Lessons and Addresses.

Edited by JOHN C. MORTON, Editor of "The Agricultural Gazette,"

"The Cyclopædia of Agriculture, &c. &c.

TWELFTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

We have much pleasure in announcing that the above Almanack for 1867 will be published by us, and that we have made arrangements for an Edition to be issued in America, and for the publication of the Work upon the Continent.

Besides the usual contents of an Almanack, it will contain a complete Record of the Year's Progress in Farming Matters generally. It circulates extensively, not only amongst Farmers and those who take an interest in Agricultural Pursuits, but also amongst the leading County Families.

We particularly beg that all Advertisements for

together with the necessary Illustrations, be sent as early as possible, to ensure a correct classification, as Advertisements delayed to the last moment cause defects in arrangement, and may be altogether excluded.

MR. CHARLES BAKER'S EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

THE CIRCLE OF KNOWLEDGE.

Designed for Classes in different Stages of Advancement.

The Titles of the Twenty-four Sections comprising 200 Lessons will convey some idea of the arrangement and variety of the subjects of these class-books.

- | | | | |
|----------------------------|----------------------------|------------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1. Introductory—Objects. | 7. The Mammalia. | 13. Of Substances. | 19. Of Other Nations. |

| 6. Of Education, &c. | 12. Of the Earth. | 18. Of Government. | 24. Attributes of God. |

Two chief objects have been kept in view in the preparation of these lessons, 1st, to provide a series of school-books suitable for elementary classes, and for home instruction at a moderate price, which should comprise information on a range of subjects more connected, extended, and systematic than has ever been introduced into English lesson books;—2ndly, to adapt this information, by a Graduated series of lessons, to children of different ages and degrees of advancement; not graduated by commencing with short words, among which are nearly all the particles—the most difficult words in a language—but by simplicity of ideas, expressed in short and easy sentences.

The subjects chosen for the lessons are such as all children are interested in, such as they continually ask questions upon, and such as are illustrated in popular works which are easily accessible to teachers and parents. It has been a main object to exclude everything that might be considered cold and lifeless, to create an interest for COMMON THINGS, and every-day life, and to make all the lessons natural and animating.

LATIN VERSE COMPOSITION.

Fourth and Cheaper Edition, considerably revised, price 3s. 6d.

A PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION to Latin Verse Composition. By THOMAS KERCHEVER ARNOLD, M.A., late Rector of Lyndon, and formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

This work supposes the pupil to be already capable of composing verses easily when the "full sense" is given. Its object is to facilitate his transition to original composition in Elegiacs and Hexameters, and to teach him to compose the Alcaic and Sapphic stanzas: explanations and a few exercises are also given on the other Horatian metres. A short Poetical Phraseology is added.

In the present Edition the whole work has been corrected, the translations being carefully compared with the originals. The Alcaics and Sapphics have been arranged in stanzas, and each kind of verse placed in a separate chapter, the old numbers of the Exercises being preserved for convenience in use. Other improvements have been made which it is hoped will add to its value.

ARNOLD'S PRACTICAL INTRODUCTIONS TO THE GREEK LANGUAGE.

THE FIRST GREEK BOOK; on the Plan of "Henry's First Latin Book." Fifth Edition. 12mo, 5s.

This is at once an easy Grammar, Construing, and Exercise Book: each lesson is followed by a Vocabulary and Exercises for translation into English and Greek; the rules for accentuation are gradually introduced into the lessons, so that the pupil is accustomed from the very beginning to write Greek words with their proper accents. Paradigms of declensions and conjugations are given, portions of which are to be learnt with each lesson. Syntactical rules and differences of idiom are added.

THE SECOND GREEK BOOK (on the same Plan). Containing an Elementary Treatise on the Greek Particles and the Formation of Greek Derivatives. 5s. 6d.

A PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION to GREEK ACCIDENCE. With Easy Exercises and Vocabulary. Seventh Edition. 8vo, 5s. 6d.

MADVIG'S SYNTAX of the GREEK LANGUAGE, especially of the Attic Dialect, for the use of Schools. Translated from the German by the Rev. HENRY BROWNE, M.A.; with an Appendix on the Greek Particles, by the Translator. 8vo, 8s. 6d.

A PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION to GREEK PROSE COMPOSITION. Tenth Edition. 8vo, 5s. 6d.

The Syntax is broken up into short lessons, each followed by a Vocabulary and Exercise, and preceded by Model sentences in Greek, containing examples of the rules, whilst each exercise contains many examples of the back rules, so that, by imitation and very frequent repetition, they may be thoroughly impressed upon the mind. The pupil thus gradually learns the niceties of the language, whilst one object is steadily kept in view, that of making the general construction of sentences of more importance than the mere government of cases.

A GREEK and ENGLISH LEXICON for the POEMS of HOMER, and the Homeridæ; illustrating the Domestic, Religious, Political, and Military Condition of the Heroic Age. With an Explanation of the most Difficult Passages. Translated from the German of Crusius. Second Edition. 12mo, 9s.

A Prospectus may be had of the Publishers.

ARNOLD'S PRACTICAL INTRODUCTIONS to LATIN PROSE.

HENRY'S FIRST LATIN BOOK. Eighteenth Edition, carefully revised and much improved. 12mo, 3s.

The object of this work is to enable the youngest boys to master the principal difficulties of the Latin language by easy steps. At first only the third person singular of a few tenses of the verb, and one case of a noun are used, the dependent words in the sentence being gradually introduced. Each lesson in Grammar is followed by a Vocabulary, an Exercise in English for translation into Latin, and one in Latin for translation into English, the work thus forming an easy progressive Grammar, Exercise and Construing Book.

SUPPLEMENTARY EXERCISES to HENRY'S FIRST LATIN BOOK.

By G. BIKRBECK HILL, B.A., Oxon, one of the Head Masters of Bruce Castle School. 12mo, 2s.

In many Schools where "Henry's First Latin Book" is used, a want of additional Exercises has been felt. This it is now intended to supply, by a little book merely supplementary, containing no new rules, and but few new words. The sentences are chiefly translations from some Latin author, by far the greater part of the phrases having been taken from Cæsar, Cicero, Livy, and Sallust.

A SECOND LATIN BOOK, and PRACTICAL GRAMMAR. Intended as a Sequel to "Henry's First Latin Book." Ninth Edition. 4s.

HISTORIÆ ANTIQUÆ EPITOME, from "Cornelius Nepos," "Justin," &c. With English Notes, Rules for Construing, Questions, Geographical Lists, &c. Seventh Edition. 4s.

This work is an Epitome of Grecian, Persian, and Roman History, chronologically arranged. The chapters in the Roman History from Eutropius are intended to be read first, being sufficiently easy for a pupil who has been through Henry's First Latin Book. Historical questions on the different Periods, with Answers, are added.

A FIRST CLASSICAL ATLAS. Containing Fifteen Maps, coloured in outline. Intended as a Companion to the "Historiæ Antiquæ Epitome." 8vo, 7s. 6d.

CORNELIUS NEPOS. Part I. With Critical Questions and Answers, and an Imitative Exercise on each Chapter. Fourth Edition. 12mo, 4s.

The object of this work is to accustom the pupil to make himself acquainted with the style of the author he is reading, and to note the peculiarities and differences of construction of Latin authors. For this purpose, questions on the arrangement and construction of sentences, and on the usage and meanings of words are given for each chapter, followed by an exercise, in which the different idioms are introduced.

A PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION to LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION. Part I. Thirteenth Edition. 8vo, 6s. 6d.

The rules for the government and arrangement of words, and the Idioms of the Latin language, are given in short lessons, and illustrated by examples from the best authors: these are to be imitated in the exercises that follow, which are so arranged that the rules are impressed on the memory by very frequent repetition. Much attention has been paid to Synonymes and to the use of the Subjunctive in Oblique Narration, and with Relative and Relative Adverbs. Throughout the book one object is steadily kept in view, that of making the general construction of sentences of more importance than the mere government of cases.

LONGER LATIN EXERCISES. Third Edition. 8vo, 4s.

The object of this work is to supply boys with an easy collection of short passages, as an Exercise Book for those who have gone once, at least, through the First Part of the Editor's Practical Introduction to Latin Prose Composition.

A PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION to LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION.

Part II. Containing the Doctrine of Latin Particles, with Vocabulary, an Antibarbarus, &c. Fourth Edition. 8vo, 8s.

GROTEFEND'S MATERIALS for TRANSLATION into LATIN. Translated from the German, with Notes and Excursuses. Third Edition. 8vo, 7s. 6d.

A KEY to the Exercises, 4s.

In this work historical extracts and dialogues have been selected for translation, accompanied by foot-notes on the construction and words to be used. At the end are some valuable Excursuses on the Latin Adverbs, Conjunctions, Participles, &c., and on the meaning of words and distinction of Synonymes.

ROMAN ANTIQUITIES. From the Swedish of Bojesen. Translated from Dr. Hoffa's German Version by the Ven. Archdeacon PAUL. Second Edition. 3s. 6d.

The present edition, which is based on that of Dr. Taylor's, of America, has several explanatory Notes and upwards of a thousand Questions appended to it by Mr. Bateman. CHEAPER EDITION of REID'S SCHOOL DICTIONARY.

Reduced to 5s., 19th Edition.

A DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH Language, containing the Pronunciation, Etymology, and Explanation of all Words authorized by Eminent Writers. By ALEXANDER REID, LL.D., late Head Master of the Edinburgh Institution.

This work is adapted to the present state of the English language and the improved methods of teaching. While the alphabetical arrangement is preserved, the words are also grouped in such a manner as to show their etymological affinity; and after the first word of each group is given the root from which they are derived. These roots are afterwards arranged into a Vocabulary. At the end is an accented List of Classical and Scriptural Proper Names.

* * * The Publishers have been frequently requested to lower the price of this Book, and it is hoped that the reduction will greatly increase its already very extensive use in Schools.

POETRY FOR SCHOOLS.

For Junior Pupils.

THE POET'S HOUR.—POETRY SELECTED and Arranged for Children. By FRANCES MARTIN, Superintendent of the Bedford College School. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. cloth.

"The principle of selection here is not one chiefly of personal taste, but experience. She has formed it on the strength of a careful induction of children's tastes; not, indeed, left to themselves, but guided 'by a light hand, that directs rather than controls'; in other words, of children's tastes under the influence of her personal preferences. Anyhow, it is a very good and wholesome taste, refined, but not too refined, for ordinary children."—Spectator.

For Older Pupils.

SPRING-TIME with the POETS. Poetry selected and arranged by FRANCES MARTIN, Superintendent of the Bedford College School. Printed on toned paper. Fcap. 8vo, 4s. 6d. cloth.

"Miss Martin may be congratulated upon the production of a volume which not only shows an intimate acquaintance with our past and present poetry, but also a nice adaptation to the most wholesome tastes of young readers."—Athenæum.

"The selection is a very full one, and represents our national poetic literature in its whole range. It is especially rich in specimens of our best living poets. We have no hesitation in saying that, for the purposes which the author has set forth, this is by far the best selection of poetry in the language."—Daily News.

AN ANCIENT HISTORY, from the Earliest Times to the Fall of the Western Empire. Forming the first period of "The History of the World." By PHILIP SMITH, B.A., one of the principal contributors to Dr. Smith's Classical Dictionaries.

"His points of transition are well chosen, and his wide and various panorama of principalities, powers, and dominions clearly arranged. He has availed himself liberally of the new lights thrown by recent discovery and philology upon the annals of the East, and in all that relates to the Oriental empires and African kingdoms or republics (if indeed that term can be applied to the timocratic, or perhaps plutocratic, Carthage) his work is far in advance of any Ancient History in our language."—Saturday Review.

PAUL'S WORK, EDINBURGH.

BALLANTYNE, ROBERTS, & CO. offer to Publishers, Authors, and the Public generally, all the advantages in Printing which their Establishment—the most amply furnished and extensive in Scotland—commands. THE MARRIAGE-KNOT, AND HOW TO TIE IT.

By a Registrar of Marriages of Twenty-eight Years' Experience in the Largest District of the Metropolis.

To tie the Marriage-knot legally is not so easy as many suppose. It is estimated that there are thousands of married people who tried by the subtleties of the marriage laws would lose their legal claim. Therefore to all about to enter into this sacred relation, the importance of this book cannot be overstated, for it offers clear and reliable information on all the forms and ceremonies to be observed in the English Church or Dissent, by Banns, by License, or by Registration; the legal rites necessary to unite Protestants with Catholics, English with Foreigners, as well as particulars about fees, &c. The volume also contains some sound advice to those about to enter into the marriage state.

London: DARTON & CO., 42, Paternoster Row.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

UNDER this heading we purpose inserting such rare and curious books as Booksellers in one part of the country may find unsaleable in their own locality, but which those elsewhere may be glad to possess. Books overbought, or bought by mistake, may thus be disposed of, but it is not intended for common every-day publications, which may, or ought to be found, in every shop. Without any wish to act the part of censor, it will be the Editor's duty to see that legitimate use is made of this list, and that, as a general rule, only such books are admitted as are likely to be sold by means of this advertisement. The list from each Advertiser must not exceed three books, the titles of which should if possible be each compressed into one line. No charge will at present be made for the insertion.

BOOKS WANTED.

Letters, stating price and condition, to be forwarded to the Advertisers.

No charge being made to Subscribers for inserting a moderate number of "Wants," it is but fair that as little trouble as possible should be given, although some appear to think that they cannot give too much, and others that they cannot possibly write too badly for the printers, nor give too much trouble to the Editor by their orthographical and bibliographical blunders. The following rules should therefore be observed:—1st. No list should include more than five books. 2. The list should be written plainly, in the same manner as the "Wants" are printed. 3. No books which have been advertised for in any other publication are admissible. 4. Catalogues wanted, or Books bearing upon specific subjects mentioned generally, and not by name, or more books than five, must be paid for at the rate of sixpence each article, and stamps sent with the list. 5. Lists must be received by the 25th of the month. 6. The Editor holds himself at liberty to reject or leave out any book or list he may think proper.

 As any infraction of these rules may lead to the rejection of the entire list, and thus cause delay and disappointment, Subscribers are requested to observe this notice.

TRADE CHANGES AND LITERARY GOSSIP

CHARING CROSS.—The business of Messrs. Byfield, Hawksworth, and Co. (established upwards of a century), has recently been purchased by Mr. Edward Stanford, the eminent map publisher, who intends, while continuing his geographical trade as heretofore at No. 6, Charing Cross, to put new energy into the more general trade at No. 21, under the designation of Byfield, Stanford, and Co. The valuation was conducted for the outgoing firm by Mr. Holmes, Paternoster Row, Mr. Gray, of Croydon, acting for Mr. Stanford.

Messrs. Bickers and Son, of Leicester Square, have permanently opened a branch dépôt, under the management of Mr. H. Dinham, late of Manchester, at 121, High Street, Eton, for the sale of books, stationery, and fancy goods.

GLASGOW.—The old-established business opposite the University has been disposed of by Mr. John Hadden to Mr. Gowanlock, of Edinburgh. Mr. Hadden now travels for several of the publishing houses who were represented by the late Mr. Alexander Black.

ARBROATH.—The business lately carried on by Mr. George Rodgers, now belongs to his nephew, Mr. John Rodgers.

LIVERPOOL.—Mr. Gray, of Croydon, informs us that Mr. Charles Bushby (son of Mr. Bushby, bookseller, Grantham), has succeeded to the business of Mr. C. Evans, at No. 40, Mill Street, Liverpool.

WARRINGTON.—Messrs. Farnell and Son, of Warrington, have disposed of their business to Mr. Richard A. Tomlinson, third son of Mr. W. Tomlinson, of Newark-on-Trent.

LINCOLN.—Mr. Holmes informs us that he has recently negotiated a partnership between Mr. Loder, of Lincoln, and Mr. Edward Barker, of Bury St. Edmunds. The partnership only extends to the printing department of Mr. Loder's business.

THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS.—This landmark of which Garth sang

"There stands a dome majestic to the sight,
And sumptuous arches bear its oval height;
A golden globe, played high with artful skill,
Seems to the distant sight a gilded pill."

has all but disappeared; the "gilded pill" has been broken up and gone the way of all old copper, and in a few weeks, the place where the "sumptuous arches" stood, will be covered with butchers' shops. The statue of Sir John Cutler will, we hear, be soon removed to grace the country residence of one of the present proprietors.

BUNHILL FIELDS.—The Ecclesiastical Commissioners, with the rapacity which sometimes distinguishes soulless birds of prey, have threatened to let out upon building leases the ground which contains the ashes of De Foe, Bunyan, and several thousand other worthies, who in their day were not members of the Established Church. Of course it is nothing more than a threat. The commissioners know very well that the country would not permit the threatened desecration; but no doubt they will succeed in squeezing money out of some one's pocket. "The commissioners are only trustees, you know, and, however disagreeable it may be, have to perform their duty." Still there are some things which even Ecclesiastical Commissioners will not venture to do, and building over Bunhill Fields is one of these things.

FAMILIAR WORDS.—Æsop informs us that, once upon a time, a jackdaw was so proud and conceited that, not content to live within his own sphere, he picked up the feathers which fell from the peacocks, stuck them in among his own, and very confidently introduced himself into an assembly of those beautiful birds; but, the fabulist goes on to say, as soon as they found him out, they not only punished the jackdaw for his presumption, but also stripped him of all his borrowed plumes. Such a daw as that referred to by Æsop is the gentleman named on the title page of Familiar Words: an index verborum; or, Quotation Handbook, with Parallel Passages of Phrases which have become embedded in our English Tongue. By J. HAIN FRISWELL. Second edition revised and enlarged.

—When the first edition of this work appeared, it received a pretty severe castigation at the hands of a contemporary; and, had Mr. Friswell possessed one grain of modesty, or the smallest particle of that commodity called common sense, he would have suffered his "Familiar Words" to drop quietly out of print; his small circle of admiring friends would have regarded him as a kind of literary martyr, and have offered their incense accordingly. This Mr. Friswell has not done; he must, therefore, abide by the consequences of his audacity. The wise man says that there are some substances which may be brayed in a mortar without their chief ingredient being eliminated; we are convinced that he was right.

Some years ago, a Boston publisher issued a volume of "Familiar Quotations," by J. Bartlett. In an evil hour, a copy of this book fell into Mr. Friswell's hands, and "at the instance of the publishers, the present work was undertaken." This, in plain English, means, that he undertook to pass Mr. Bartlett's Quotations through his own alembic, adding such other ingredients as could be obtained with the least trouble to himself. Mr. Bartlett, following the plan of Mr. Murray's Dictionary, had arranged his quotations under the name of the author from whom the selection was made. Mr. Friswell first set to work by cutting up these fragments, and then arranging them under subjects. Had this been properly done, and fairly and honourably acknowledged, no one could have complained; but Mr. Friswell neither did his work well, nor did he acknowledge the source of his inspiration. So far from doing the former, he made scores of blunders, many of which have been already exposed in the columns of the Athenæum; and instead of doing the latter, he returns his thanks to several and sundry, and "to a work published in America, by Mr. Bartlett, in which all the quotations from one author, are placed under the same name, and who has omitted nearly twenty authors here quoted from," one of these omitted authors being no less a personage than Mr. J. Hain Friswell. He further says that "The work has been a long time in hand, line has been added to line, and in its progress it has grown to its present dimensions, which are larger than was at first contemplated. When it is stated that, if each line given be reckoned as a quotation, and many lines contain two, there are nearly seven thousand in the volume, the difficulty as well as the value of exact reference will be seen, and, it is to be hoped, PLACED TO THE ACCOUNT OF THE COMPILER by an indulgent public, as a set off against the few errata it was almost impossible to avoid." Nothing can be more explicit than this; the whole credit of the work, design, plan, and execution, all are Mr.

Friswell's. He simply did what any honest compiler would do—he borrowed a little from one, and a little from another, furnished the greater portion himself, and even lent additional charms to the labour of his predecessors by the brilliancy of his own setting: at least this is what he would have us believe. But he did no such thing. The charge we have to bring against Mr. Friswell is, that he has appropriated the labours of another in a most dishonest manner, and has endeavoured to take the whole credit to himself. This is a heavy charge, and we should not be dealing fairly with our readers unless we were able to substantiate it. We, therefore, offer some evidence in support of the charge, and are prepared with plenty more in case of need.

The following facts, from the first edition, speak for themselves:—

Page 1 contains six quotations; five of them are in Mr. Bartlett's book. The one original contains a blunder. At the bottom is a note with ED.—i.e., Mr. Friswell, appended. The note was written by Mr. Bartlett.

Page 3.—Eight. Seven of them from Bartlett, one being from the Miscellaneous Section; and to this the sapient ED. has given Miscel. as the author.

Page 6.—Six quotations, all Bartlett's.

Page 7.—Six, all Bartlett's, with three blunders of his own, including one wrong reference.

Page 8.—Nine quotations, all Bartlett's, with one wrong reference; Troilus and Cressida being given instead of Julius Cæsar.

Page 9.—Eight quotations, all Bartlett's.

Page 10.—Three quotations, all Bartlett's.

The first ten pages are specimens of the whole book, and we need not quote any more to prove that Mr. Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" has, with scarcely any exception, been taken up by the ED. of the "Familiar Words." This appropriation has been effected in so careless a manner, that nothing but the grossest unfamiliarity with the "familiar words" of our most popular authors prevented the ED. from detecting his own blunders. Mr. Bartlett occasionally gives two authors on a page, the second or last name only being placed at the top, e.g. Lovelace and Herrick—the last quotation being from Herrick; the ED. in copying cast his eye on the first, and, as on page 36, gives Herrick as the author of what Lovelace wrote. Perhaps the most dishonest thing of all consists in taking Mr. Bartlett's notes and putting ED. i.e., Mr. J. Hain Friswell to them, as in pages 110, 120, 128, 133, 137, and numerous other places, the phraseology being occasionally altered. We pass by the mere errata with the remark that we could add a considerable number to the long list already furnished by the Athenæum, a list which, if we remember rightly, extended to several hundred.

Having thus traced the source whence the volume sprang, and given evidence of the truthfulness of our charge, we leave the first edition, and pass on to the second, which has only made its appearance this month.

From so many errors having been pointed out in the first edition, it might reasonably have been supposed that, before issuing a second, every quotation from every author would have been verified, proper references given, and all traces of transatlantic blunders and pilferings obliterated; a graceful reference too might have been made of the editor's obligations to Mr. Bartlett, and, in fact, to have behaved like the dog, of whom Burns says,

"His locked, lettered bran brass collar, Showed him the gentleman and scholar;"

but, some dogs never rise to dog's estate, or become gentlemen, and the editor of "Familiar Words," appears incapable of using an open door, even when it has been left ajar, ready for him to make a graceful exit. Or, if he could not have done simple justice to Mr. Bartlett and his work, he might, to use some "familiar words," have left them alone. This, however, was beyond Mr. Hain Friswell's power. Accordingly, in the preface to the new edition, we find him making the following depreciatory reference to his quarry. He says: "A work of Mr. Bartlett's, published in America, would have been used as a basis, had not it been found, on examination, to have been taken, in a very great measure, from an English predecessor of the same nature. . . . Some of the less known American authors were cited from Mr. Bartlett's book, but many of these lines not being familiar in this country, have been, in the present edition, excised, and others substituted from English writers of an earlier date." Is it possible that the "editor" cannot write plain English? He would have used Mr. Bartlett's book, only on finding &c., he did not; next, he says, he did take certain American quotations, but these he has left out. What are we to understand? It reminds us of the special pleas put in about the celebrated washing-tub.

1. That it was in bad condition, when borrowed.
2. That it was in good repair, when returned.
3. That it never was borrowed at all.

Passing by Mr. Bartlett, we are assured it has been a work of difficulty to make a multitude of transcripts, certify all quotations, and to remedy his own defects or those of the poor printer's devil. After all this promise of excellence, we were naturally anxious to see how the performance turns out. We have had neither time nor inclination to test the volume through, and only referred to those authors which were at hand upon our shelves. The result, we regret to say, fully confirms the opinion we had formed of the carelessness and dishonesty of the compilation:—

 "Through whim (our critics) or by envy led,
 They damn those authors whom they never read."

We assure Mr. Friswell that we do no such thing. In the present case he will see that we have read his precious compilation with some interest, and, furthermore, beg to assure him that the author quoted never wrote the first of the above lines. What Churchill wrote was:—

- "Though by whim, envy, or resentment led, &c."

It will be observed that the errors pointed out are in the first 113 pages of a volume containing more than four hundred; our readers will, therefore, readily believe that we are not over-stating the truth when we say that we have detected many score more, and in addition have also marked numerous passages which look doubtful. Another feature too, and one which makes us doubt the originality of the research, is, that a considerable number of the quotations have so vague a reference, that it is next to impossible to find them in the author named, as at page 61, where the reference is "Tennyson's Poems," or at page 47, where it is simply "Times Newspaper." That both passages are to be found, we do not deny, but we want means to verify them, for no one wishing to make use of this book could venture to quote them, or anything else therefrom, on the mere authority of the Ed., without rendering himself liable to become a laughing-stock.

When the first edition of the "Familiar Words" made its appearance, we thought it an honest and praiseworthy undertaking. When the ostensible author was abused, and the work attacked, as it appeared to us, unfairly, we took Mr. Friswell's side. We regret to find that we were mistaken—the book is entirely worthless; but this is its smallest sin—it is a disgrace to our literature.

QUAKER BIBLIOGRAPHY.—Our Pennsylvania friends will be glad to know that one Joseph Smith, of No. 2, Oxford Street, Whitechapel, in this city, hath in hand "A descriptive Catalogue of Friends' Books, or books written by members of the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers;" and that he hath recently published a new part, at the price of one shilling. This part containeth a complete Barclay bibliography.

KING'S INTEREST TABLES.—A new edition of this well-known and useful book has been issued by Messrs. Bell and Daldy at the remarkably low price of seven shillings and sixpence. It is a full-size octavo, well printed in large and distinct type, containing nearly eight hundred pages, and is bound in cloth, with cut edges, and in fact is in every respect as good a book as when sold by Messrs. Longman and Co. at a guinea. King's Tables, we believe, are used by the Bank of England, and by all the London bankers; but the book is too well known to require any notice beyond the low price at which this edition is published.

Messrs. Cassell, Petter, & Galpin, announce quite a number of books, all illustrated, amongst them an edition of Milton's "Paradise Lost," edited by Dr. Robert Vaughan, with large designs by Gustave Doré, who will in this work have full scope for his fervid imagination. A new edition of "The Wandering Jew," with twelve illustrations by Doré; these are certainly to be numbered amongst the best and most original of Doré's designs. A guinea volume, "The Chivalric History of Croquemitaine, and the Times of Charlemagne," very freely rendered from the French by Tom Hood. They also announce the completion of their pictorial edition of "Foxe's Book of Martyrs;" the first divisional volume of "Doré's Illustrated Bible," and several other popular works.

EMERSON'S WORKS.—In America there has been no collected edition of the works of Ralph Waldo Emerson. The Essays, The Miscellanies, Representative Men, English Traits, Poems, and The Conduct of Life, form seven volumes, and cost ten and a half dollars, or 42s. Messrs. Bell and Daldy have just published a collected edition, in two nicely printed post octavo volumes, for seven shillings. The works are copyright in one country but not in the other, hence the difference of price, and in this instance, as Mr. Emerson's writings are highly appreciated here, the English have the best of it.

OLD PLAYS.—To the enterprise and good taste of an American publishing house we owe our best collection of British Ballads—the only collection with which a student finds it impossible to dispense: and by the same house, that of Messrs. Little, Brown, and Co., of Boston, we are now promised a collection of old plays, edited by Professor James Russell Lowell. The authors range from the time of Kit Marlowe down to that of glorious John Dryden. An introduction to each author will be given, also copious annotations, and the work will make ten volumes. It is not generally known in this country that the best and most complete edition of the British Poets is that of Messrs. Little and Brown, in 128 volumes; these are not all mere reprints of English editions, but some of the authors have been carefully revised. Of the works of Edmund Burke, now in course of publication by the same, it is said that not a volume has been seen in this country: yet American scholars tell us that it is vastly superior to any edition ever published here.

Cassell's Large Map of London.—How old Mr. Faden, the mapseller, would stare, could he revisit London and be shown this magnificent nine-sheet map, now in course of publication, at threepence a sheet. The map is nearly as well executed as Roque's, that which collectors so highly prize. It contains all the new streets, and what is of more consequence still, the new names to the old streets.

BIBLIOTHECA HISTORICA.—Under this title, Mr. Brockhaus, of Leipzig, has recently issued a voluminous catalogue, compiled only as Germans know how. It is entitled "Verzeichniss einer Sammlung von Werken aus dem gebiete der Geschichte und deren Hilfswissenschaften Vorräthig auf dem lager von F. A. Brockhaus' sortiment und Antiquarium in Leipzig;" and is one of the most complete historical catalogues ever issued. It is arranged under countries, with numerous sub-divisions. Thus of England, we first have General History, then Early History, followed by that of James I. to Charles II., James II., and William III.; then from George I. downwards. The next divisions are Geography and Travels, and lastly, Scotland and Ireland. The collection of works relating to Germany is, as may be expected, very large, but that of such countries as South America and Australia is really surprising. It contains nearly 400 pages, and enumerates no fewer than 8,663 different works—all with prices.

A DISREPUTABLE TRANSACTION.—Messrs. Hilton and Co., 128, Nassau Street, New York, inform us by their advertisement, that they sold 10,000 copies of a trashy book called What is this Mystery? by forging the name of Miss M. E. Braddon. That is to say, they cheated the public into the belief that this book was written by that lady. Miss Braddon has most indignantly repudiated the book. She says, "I never wrote a novel with the title given, I have never had any correspondence with its publishers, who, nevertheless, announce their book as printed from my 'advance sheets,' and who also characterise the work as 'Miss Braddon's latest and best.' It may be—I hope it is not—in accordance with American notions of literary fair dealing to make these positively false statements. Messrs. Hilton and Co. may derive profit from them; but the true interests of literature and its commerce cannot be served by such audacious mendacity." Miss Braddon is right; the transaction is disgraceful, and we shall be much surprised if the American literary journals do not denounce the conduct of Messrs. Hilton and Co., in the manner it deserves.

The "Handbook of Specimens of English Literature," by Dr. Angus, issued by the Religious Tract Society, is a work we are glad to see. It completes the series, the other books being the "Handbook of English Literature" and the "Handbook of the English Tongue." Books of this kind do great service to literature, by giving a taste of its beauties to thousands who otherwise would be unable to obtain any insight. The specimens in this volume are selected with great judgment, and are arranged chronologically; they not only illustrate the growth of the language and the style of the author, but they are generally of sufficient interest to be read for their own sakes. There is, however, one defect which we hope may be remedied in future editions, that is, the editor has included no selections from our dramatic authors except Shakespeare. It was, perhaps, difficult for a religious society to sanction extracts from Mrs. Behn or from some of Dryden's plays.

A BIT OF BUNKUM.—The American Literary Gazette gives a list of "Books published in the United States," also a list of books published there, but "manufactured abroad," i.e., such a book as "Cosas de Espana," imported by Messrs. Strahan, who have a house at New York; but the editor of the A. L. G. omits to give a list of the purely American books which were written by English authors. Perhaps he will in future be kind enough to distinguish them. A book usually consists of something more than blank paper; "Felix Holt" may be printed upon, and bound up in the purest native material, yet for all that "The Radical" is not an American production.

UNDOING THE ANONYMOUS.—In the Guardian there appears weekly a column or so of what is called Table Talk, some of it amusing and some of it quite the reverse. The writer signs his contribution X., but every week manages, in some way or other, to keep one person constantly before his readers. One week we find that he is better informed about Once a Week than any one but the editor can be, and the same of the Gentleman's Magazine. This week he tells us of a remarkable event in the life of a clergyman who left the Church of England for that of Rome, and has since returned. And to crown all he gives us a most pathetic story of the hardships endured by the editor of a Peerage and Baronetage, from two rival claimants of a baronetage all but meeting on his staircase, and both being in a towering passion. It is wonderful how much a man may write of any one person that he keeps constantly in view.

A WARNING TO PRINTERS.—According to the recent advices from India, the police in June last entered the premises of a printer in Calcutta and seized a large quantity of forged labels of several English manufacturers, among which were those of Allsopp and Sons, Lea and Perrins, P. and J. Arnold, Day and Martin, and Crosse and Blackwell. The latter firm immediately commenced a prosecution under the Trades' Marks Acts (India), section 435 of the Penal Code, which resulted in the conviction of the offender, and his being sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. A similar punishment was awarded to a native by whom some of the spurious goods upon which the forged labels were placed had been sold.—Times, Aug. 27.

NEWSPAPER FLUNKEYISM.—In describing an accident which happened some years ago, when eight or ten persons were killed and as many more injured, a Scottish newspaper said fortunately the only persons in the train were drovers and labourers; had it happened a quarter of an hour earlier the Duchess of— we forget where— might have lost her life. This "fortunately" was the subject of comment at the time, and the flunkeyism of the paper was well laughed at. But in the Times of August 27 we notice two obituary paragraphs, one merely stating that Mr. Alcock, late member for Surrey, died on such a day, the next regrets the death of Earl Craven; had it been a marquis no doubt the regret would have been extreme, and had it been a duke the regret would probably have been profound.

Funny Fables for Little Folks.—A little volume just issued by Messrs. Griffin and Co. is deserving of notice, on account of the illustrations by Grandville—they are not new, but they are fresh. We are wearying of the monotony of English woodcuts. Artists of the present day only appear to have one stock of ideas and faces and lay figures, they are thus prepared to illustrate any book at a moment's notice, and do not even require a copy of the book to read—their illustrations serving as pictures for Cowper, Longfellow, Wordsworth, or any other poet equally as well. These illustrations of Grandville's, on the contrary, have the credit of illustrating the text.

EPICTETUS.—Epictetus the stoic is at once one of the most popular and one of the least known of the ancient philosophers. His philosophy is so practical, and has so direct a reference to the affairs of every-day life, and his system is so simple, that he who runs may read with understanding; he is the authority usually referred to when a passage is heralded by the phrase "as the philosopher says;" he is frequently quoted by country newspapers; his sayings form a large proportion of the best known apothegms in our language. And yet the public know little of Epictetus. They are ignorant of the place of his birth, of his rank and condition, of the school of thought to which he belonged. They could not say whether he was Roman or Grecian, or Alexandrian. They only know he was a philosopher.

He was a Greek, born in Phrygia, and in the first century of our era resided at Rome as the slave of Epaphroditus. His master was himself only a freedman of Nero. The Romans did not think much of philosophers. Unlike the English, who are beginning to think it right to put their philosophers into Parliament, they treated them rather shabbily. We should now be greatly surprised to find Mr. Mill or Mr. Tupper, or any other philosopher, verbal or proverbial, in the family of an ex-steward of the Prince of Wales. The tough-headed Romans, however, saw nothing incongruous in such a situation. Philosophers were not altogether to their mind, and Domitian banished them from Rome. Upon this event Epictetus, who had become free, is said to have retired to Nicopolis, in Epirus, where he taught as before, and there he probably died in the early part of the second century. Like Plato and some others, Epictetus wrote nothing, but discoursed his philosophy. A disciple, Arrian, collected his observations into eight books, four of which only remain. It is there together with the "Enchiridion" and a few fragments that are now before us in an English version, from the press of Messrs. Little, Brown, and Co, of Boston. The translation is by Mr. Thomas W. Higginson, an American, who has performed his labour of love very creditably. It is based on that by Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, the lady whom Dr. Johnson declared to be the best Greek scholar in England of her day; but although the Englishwoman's work forms the foundation of this Mr. Higginson has made so many alterations, additions, and revisions, that it may be considered a new rendering. It speaks well for the reading public of America that such a work as this should have been selected for publication, and we hope the translation, which is admirably printed and otherwise well got up, will go through as many editions as its prototype.

PROFESSOR WILSON'S WORKS. Essays 4 vols.—Messrs. Blackwood have recently completed their cheap re-issue of the collected edition of the works of Professor Wilson, and admirers of sturdy old Christopher may now revel in his effusions to their hearts' content.

There are English writers whose voice, whilst they lived, was scarcely loud enough to be heard by their contemporaries, but which, day by day, is becoming more distinct and powerful as they themselves recede in point of time. On the contrary, there are others whose utterances filled the ears of their contemporaries; whose names were familiar in men's mouths as household words; whose praise was profit and whose condemnation misfortune, but who have ceased to exercise appreciable influence on their descendants. Their fame and reputation is gradually decreasing with the years, and we begin to wonder how they obtained and preserved the celebrity they once undoubtedly possessed. In the latter class, we believe, must Professor Wilson now be reluctantly placed. Forty years ago he was a power in literature. The witching humour of a Lamb was neglected for his more vigorous productions, and people turned unsatisfied from works that have since become classics to regale themselves with the Noctes Ambrosianæ. But a change has come, and there are those amongst us who know not Christopher North.

The new generation is now and here presented by the Messrs. Blackwood with an opportunity of acquainting itself with the writings that helped to establish the professor's great fame. It is true, none of these essays were prepared for republication by the author himself. In this respect they share the disadvantage which attaches to the Noctes. But they all seem to have been deliberately considered by him as worthy of reappearance. Separate copies of all his contributions to Blackwood had, we are told by the editor, been made up for his use, and were in his hands some years before his death. "On the covers of these copies he has, in most cases, jotted down a memorandum expressing, very briefly, his opinion of the article in question, and signifying, either directly or inferentially, what pieces were, in his judgment, worthy and not worthy of republication. It is by these memoranda, principally, that I have been guided in bringing together this compilation. I have, in so far as the greater portion—indeed I might say the whole—of its contents are concerned, the professor's own authority for sending it forth."

Here, then, although the work has not received the benefit that is always derived from the author's final emendations, readers will derive definite and accurate notions of Professor Wilson's manner, style, and opinion, and be enabled to form a tolerably correct estimate of the place he should occupy in the hierarchy of literature. The topics treated are numerous and very various. Politics, morals, æsthetics, the belles lettres, sports, education—have all formed subjects for his pen, and have all been handled in the author's characteristic manner. The essays, moreover, are, with few exceptions, of not older date than the year 1826, so that crude attempts at authority are excluded, and we have a selection commencing at that period when he began to put forth his full strength, and "to rejoice in the untrammelled exercise of his varied and peculiar powers."

In these volumes we have communion with one of the most eminent representatives of a phase of literature which has disappeared, but with which all students of our literary history ought to be well acquainted; and it is, we think, more from this circumstance than because of their intrinsic merits that they derive their consequence. The chief defect we notice in Wilson is his want of catholicity and toleration. His manner conveys the impression that men who wandered not on heath and felt no pleasure in climbing mountain-tops were vastly inferior to those who loved the braes and burns of Scotland. By some curious and unaccountable mental process he had come to the conclusion, that writers in populous city parts, who were in constant intercourse with the last and best results of civilization, were "cockneys," and naturally below the par of himself and others, who derived their information from a different source. Above all, he believed that Professor Wilson was a very important factor in the working of Providence, and that Scotsmen occupy the same position in the Old World as the Beechers do in America. Not only was his mind limited by this provincialism, but in the arena of politics it was equally confined. These defects did not, however, injure him. He was at once intolerant and warm-hearted; bigoted and disposed to conciliate foes. The style of these essays is as varied as are the subjects. It is occasionally blemished by strata of fine writing, and very frequently its energy becomes offensive from colloquialism, and an affectation of superiority that might not inaptly be termed "bumptiousness." But there is much to admire and something to love in these pages, and time spent in familiarising himself with the moods, grave and gay, of Christopher North, and making himself acquainted with the kind of material which, in what is called her palmy days, made old Maga honoured and feared will not be lost by the reader.

A NEW LATIN GRAMMAR.—Many persons learned, for the first time, from the following advertisement, that the Nine, we can hardly call them Graces, had been actively engaged in preparing a new Primer:—

"THE PUBLIC SCHOOL LATIN PRIMER (edited with the sanction of the Head Masters of the Nine Public Schools named in Her Majesty's Commission) will be published on Thursday, the 23rd inst., price half-a-crown. The publishers beg leave to state that the book to which objections have appeared in several journals was a mere proof copy of the Primer, confidentially circulated for private criticism. This copy had been wholly reprinted in a different form, and with much alteration, before the objections were made. The work has since undergone thorough revision, with especial reference to criticisms sent and improvements suggested by many scholars engaged in classical instruction—the result being, that a large number of those who had been cited as entertaining some objection to the proof copy have expressed general approbation of the revised Primer."

Dr. Kennedy appears to put in the first claim to the paternity of the book. Which of "the Nine" are of the feminine gender is not so apparent; but, notwithstanding its extensive parentage, the bantling does not seem to give the required satisfaction. "A Grinder of Small Boys," in writing to the Times, says:—

"The teaching of little dull boys to learn Latin is a work of such peculiar difficulty that many of us who are engaged in it were inclined to suspect that head masters of public schools were not unlikely to overshoot the mark. Dr. Kennedy is a name very dear to classical scholars, but his experience in dealing with the stupidity of little boys beginning to learn Latin is perhaps as doubtful as the fitness of a Hampton Lecturer to write sermons for ignorant rustics. Little boys cannot be philosophers, and therefore if you attempt to teach them philosophically you only bewilder and dishearten them. The philosophy must come afterwards, and meanwhile you must be content to give them something imperfect but intelligible—something short, pithy, and practically useful."

"The new Primer, in the first place, following the German grammarians, upsets the old order of cases, the accusative being promoted to the second place, while the genitive is degraded to the third and the dative to the fourth place. This surely was hardly necessary, for if old familiar things are thus to be disturbed on philosophical principles, why not attack the alphabet itself, the letters of which are arranged in anything but a philosophical order?"

"At page 23, under 'aliquis,' is not the form 'aliquē' of doubtful advantage to small boys? Again, is the declension of 'qui-quis' satisfactorily given, and why omit the form 'quicquid'? Then, again, for the neuter of 'quisque,' why give only the form 'quicque'? Surely this list wants revision."

"But it is the Syntax that makes one most gloomy, and when I read, as at page 97, 'The complement of an infinitive is generally put in the accusative,' and, at page 98, 'Trajective words take a dative,' I am haunted by the small boy's look of blank astonishment when first introduced to the new philosophy."

"We all remember that familiar use of the Latin dative in the well-known line, 'exitio est avidum mare nautis,' and that the dative is constantly used to express the end or object served by anything. How does the new Primer teach this to little boys?—'A dative of the thing is put as a complement, a dative of the recipient being often added' (p. 101.) Very scientific, no doubt, but utterly unintelligible to beginners."

"Again, the old way of explaining the dative 'otioso,' in the sentence 'licuit Themistocli esse otioso,' was surely correct enough for all practical purposes but what is the improved rule, according to the new Primer?—'A dative of the complement is used by attraction, especially in expressions of naming.'"

"But as a closing illustration may be quoted the rule for explaining the infinitive in such a sentence as 'Patria diceris esse pater,' which is couched in these terms:—'The infinitive stands primarily, after prolatives verbs and adjectives.' Let any one, by way of experiment, try these two latter rules on any ordinary little boy, and he will see the effect."

"From these specimens, which are taken hurriedly and at random, it will be seen that this new Latin Primer, in spite of its many merits, is not adapted to the intelligence or capacity of ordinary young boys, and that the fear of being inaccurate and incomplete has betrayed the accomplished editor into the much-dreaded mistake of being too hard. Having been engaged for many years in the up-hill work of teaching little boys, and having successfully prepared my own sons for the Eton and Winchester Foundations, I naturally feel a lively interest in this Latin Grammar question, and trust that even now it is not too late to make such alterations as may render the new Primer satisfactory."

CORRESPONDENCE.

WEEKLY PAYMENT OF ASSISTANTS.

To the Editor of the BOOKSELLER.

SIR,—Knowing your willingness at all times to use your pen in ameliorating the condition, and removing the abuses in the trade, I have ventured to write a few lines to you on a subject to which I am sure you will readily render all the assistance that lies in your power. It is "the manner in which salaries are paid to servants in several of our large houses." I mean those houses who are in the habit of paying their servants monthly. If gentlemen, heads of firms, knew the inconvenience and petty dishonesties that arise from this system, I am convinced that they would, at once, pay their servants weekly. For example, we will take a man with a wife and family of five or six children to provide for, who has to wait a whole month for his wages. Frequently there are five Sundays in the month; in a great many instances, Sunday falls on the last of the month or the first of the next month, that man is compelled to wait till the second of the month before he receives his salary, and being hard pressed at times, he borrows from the collector. The collector not wishing to be at variance with the head of the division, or those above him, advances money from his collecting funds; the result is, that he scarcely or ever comes up with his balance, and if he does do so, it is only by contracting small debts in the Row, which he is unable to pay, to see his way clear. I am sure, Mr. Editor, if these facts were laid before the heads of firms, they would see at once the fallacy of paying salaries monthly. Then, on the other hand, some may say that gentlemen do not like to be troubled with paying weekly salaries, but surely some trustworthy person can be found to pay small amounts on Saturdays. It is done in very many large houses, and why not in our trade? If it were done, it would be the means of removing the existing evil, and I am sure would confer a great boon upon the working community in our trade, and would tend to foster good-will between employer and employé. If you would kindly find a corner in your valuable periodical for this letter, it may, I trust, have the desired effect.

I remain, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
G. G.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

To the Editor of the BOOKSELLER.

SIR,—I wish to bring under the notice of the supporters of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, a circumstance which recently came to my knowledge, and to ask whether it is with their sanction and approval that their Institution, supported by them so liberally, should be conducted upon such an exclusive and illiberal principle.

A worthy man, whom I have long known and respected, a collector for a considerable firm in the commission trade, made application to become a member of the Institution. He was prepared to pay his subscription for a number of years in advance. The man's employment is and has been for many years to collect the books required by the firm, and the intelligent business-like manner in which he transacts his business is very creditable to him.

And why could he not be admitted? Why, indeed! The worthy custodians of the Institution decided otherwise. They visited the applicant's employers, looked round their place of business, I believe, and finally decided (although they send out more books in a week than many a bookseller does in a year), that they were not booksellers in the strict and proper sense of that term, that they sold so many periodicals and newspapers, that whatever number of books they sent out, they were not booksellers, and one of their book collectors could not be allowed to become a member of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. I state these facts as given to me, and believe them to be entirely true. Whether the supporters of the Institution approve of such hair-splitting, and whether it is the kind of spirit in which applicants should be received, I leave with them to determine.

Very respectfully yours,

A BOOKSELLER,

OBITUARY.

SAMUEL MAYNARD.—Of this somewhat remarkable man, who died May 7, at the Bookseller's Provident Retreat, the Athenæum of August 25, gives the following kindly notice. At twenty years of age he came from Taunton to London and opened a school in Clarendon Square, Somers Town, in which he was successful for some years. He then opened a small shop in Crown Court, Fleet Street, for the sale of mathematical books; from whence he removed to Earl's Court, Leicester Square, where he carried on business for thirty years. In his old age he was glad to accept an asylum as above, in 1862, where he remained until his death. All who had anything to do with mathematics knew the little booth in Earl's Court, crowded with old and dusty books, and the man who seemed to know all the English part of his stock. Mr. Maynard was a competent mathematician, and edited, for booksellers, various works on the lower branches. His particular study was the almanack and its construction: on this point he has left a very elaborate manuscript, which is at present at the apartments of the Astronomical Society. Mr. Maynard carried on his business on the plan of high prices and slow returns: this is not the way to thrive in our day. But it was not altogether on commercial principles that he acted. He was, by his knowledge of the intellectual value of his store, a little bit of a bibliotaph: we have reason to think he had this feeling to an extent he knew nothing of himself. When his books came to be sold by auction at his retirement—1,200 lots, most of them packages, for so the auctioneers sell miscellaneous shop-stock—many books turned up which, to our knowledge, he had been asked for, and did not produce. Some of them, we have no doubt, were reserved, not for private use, but to enjoy the feeling of possession. Maynard published fourteen catalogues: they are well known by the title-pages, which have, between the binomial theorem above and Taylor's theorem below, Euclid I. 47, with his name, address, and business worked into the diagram, supported on one side by the cone, sphere, and cylinder of Archimedes, and on the other by the Copernican system shining through clouds. He was an upright and simple-minded man. The mathematicians make no more pilgrimages to 8, Earl's Court. They miss the shop to which all their rare books came at last: and they miss their old friend, whom they used to interrupt when deep in the construction of a catalogue, and the consultation about the abbreviation of a word or the meaning of a title.

June —, at Adelaide, Australia, Mr. A. H. Davis, formerly of the well-known Nonconformist publishing house of Westley and Davis, Stationer's Hall Court. Immediately after the failure of this firm in 1838 Mr. Davis went to Australia, and commenced business as a merchant, at the same taking a prominent part in local politics, first as an advanced Liberal, and more recently as a staunch Conservative. In 1859 Mr. Davis started a paper, called the Thursday Review, but it was unsuccessful.

July 23rd.—Aged 55, Mr. Thomas Delf, formerly of the firm of Delf and Trübner, Paternoster Row, American Booksellers.—The deceased, who was born in London, had the misfortune when a child to lose his father, and in consequence was sent to Ipswich, where his uncle, a small tradesman, brought him up. At an early age he returned to London and obtained employment in the shop of an oilman in Newgate Street, where he spent every leisure moment in reading. One of the customers, struck with the lad's intelligence, entered into conversation with him, lent him books, and eventually induced him to go to the United States. He was then but twenty, yet immediately after landing he obtained a clerkship in a broker's office, but soon found more congenial employment in the Mercantile Library at New York; by an easy gradation he passed into the book store of Messrs. Wiley and Putnam, who supplied the library; his stay here was but short, for in 1843 he came to England as London agent for Messrs. Appleton and Co. He again visited America in 1846, and returned to London the following year; but breaking off his connection with Messrs. Appleton, he joined the business of Mr. Jno. Chapman, then, in the Strand. Messrs. Wiley and Putnam, who had been doing a large trade in American books under the management of Mr. G. P. Putnam, in London, discontinued the business here. Mr. Putnam went to America and commenced business apart from Mr. Wiley. Mr. Delf opened on his own account in Bow Lane, taking Mr. Putnam's agency. From Bow Lane he removed to Paternoster Row, where he was joined by Mr. Nicholas Trübner, then clerk in the foreign department of Messrs. Longmans and Co. The firm of Delf and Trübner, American booksellers and publishers, commenced business in 1851, but from some cause or other it lasted but one year. Mr. Delf retired, and the late Mr. Nutt coming forward with sufficient capital, the flourishing firm of Trübner and Co. succeeded. Finding himself shut out from the business, Mr. Delf turned his attention to literature, and thenceforward up to the time of his decease obtained a living by the use of his pen. At various times he projected "The Artist," "The Children's Journal," "The Photographic Art Journal," "The Royal Cook," and a few months before his death had a considerable share in the production of the "British Workman." At various times he contributed to the "Art Journal," "Art Student," "London Review," "Manchester Guardian," "Gentleman's Magazine," and other publications. While with Messrs. Appleton he compiled a valuable "Library Manual," a work which is to be found on the shelves of most book collectors in America. Under the nom de plume of Charles Martel he translated from the French a work on the "Laws of Colour," by Chevreul, and also issued ten or a dozen other books, partly by himself, partly compiled and some translated, but none with his own name upon the title page.

August 4, at his residence, Lewisham, aged 84, Mr. Thomas Sotheran, formerly of Great Tower Street. In the BOOKSELLER for April, 1862, our readers will find the account of a dinner given at the Albion Tavern, to celebrate the "Golden Wedding" of the deceased. On that occasion we gave some notice of Mr. Sotheran and his family, a portion of which we now reproduce.

"Henry Sotheran, the first bookseller of the family, about the year 1750, left his native village of Ampleforth, in Yorkshire, for the city of York, about 20 miles distant, where he was apprenticed to a druggist in the Thursday Market. From the same village of Ampleforth, where members of the family had been settled as yeomen-farmers for several generations, came a lad of about the same age, named John Todd, who was apprenticed to Mr. Hildyard, a bookseller, at the sign of the Golden Bible, in Stonegate. An intimate friendship naturally sprang up between the two youths, and as Hildyard was desirous of retiring from business about 1756 or 1757, Todd proposed to Sotheran that they should try to raise the necessary capital, and take the business. Sotheran accordingly went to Ampleforth, and was fortunate enough to bring back to York sufficient for the purpose; and, in the year 1757, the name of Hildyard gave place to that of Todd and Sotheran. At this time York was a flourishing place for booksellers. One firm, that of Wilson and Mawman, was long regarded as among the most wealthy out of London. Mawman afterwards left, and succeeded Dilly in London. The firm of Todd and Sotheran was not of long duration; neither were blessed with the most amiable tempers, and about the year 1760 a division took place, Todd retaining the old premises in Stonegate, where he died in 1811, and was succeeded by his sons, John and George, whose names are still well remembered; they both died unmarried. Sotheran took a house in St. Helen's Square, adjoining the church, but afterwards removed to one which he purchased at the opposite corner of Blake Street, where the Savings-Bank now stands. He died in 1813, having retired to the village of Acomb, near York, a few years before his death. His only son Thomas was in partnership with him, and after his father's death continued the business; he died in 1833, and was in turn succeeded by his eldest son, the present Henry Sotheran, of Coney Street, who has recently erected a beautiful memorial window by Hardman, in the church of St. Helen's, in memory of his grandfather, which will serve for some centuries to come to perpetuate the connection of the name of Sotheran with the City of York. Mr. Thomas Sotheran, whose wedding we have been celebrating, also came from Ampleforth, in 1796, to be apprenticed to his uncle, and when out of his time, true to his "Southeran" inclinations, turned his face towards London, with letters of introduction to several well-known publishing houses: one was to Longman and Co., but they having no opening in their own establishment, took him on to John and Arthur Arch, the Quaker booksellers of Cornhill, who engaged him before he had been twenty-four hours in London. Here he remained eight years in the company, during a portion of his time with the late Wm. Pickering, Leggatt, the printseller, and Lewis, the auctioneer. Having served Messrs. Arch so much to their satisfaction, those gentlemen transferred, without any payment, to Mr. Sotheran, the whole of their stationery trade; and in 1812 he commenced business in Old Broad Street, and remained there till 1816, when he removed to Tower Street; and when the Messrs. Arch retired from business, he added the bookselling to his stationery trade, both of which he carried on most successfully up to the time of his retirement, if he can be said to have retired, for we believe that, although in his eightieth year, business still presents some charms to his active mind. From 1834 to 1841 he was assisted by his son Henry, who in the latter year was taken into partnership, and has since spread the name of Sotheran more widely than all his predecessors put together.

"Mr. Henry Sotheran's progress is noticeable. In 1853 he purchased the stock and business of Mr. E. C. Stibbs, of 331, Strand; and in 1856 joined Mr. George Willis, who at that time was becoming, what the united firm has since become, the largest retail bookseller in London. The firm of Willis and Sotheran now have four establishments:—1. The old house in Tower Street. 2. Another house in the same street, for their Fine Art Establishment, where they carry on a large trade in paintings and engravings. 3. At 42, Charing Cross. 4. The establishment at 136, Strand. The stock of books in their houses cannot be less than 500,000 volumes—the largest, most valuable, and best-selected stock in London, perhaps in the world. Yet, large as is the stock, it is so well arranged that any work can be instantly found: their recently-published catalogue, a goodly volume of 632 pages, contains 15,512 articles."

Last month we recorded the dissolution of the firm of Messrs. Willis and Sotheran. Mr. Willis, we hear, is about recommencing business, as an auctioneer and picture dealer, in the premises recently occupied by Mr. Henry Southgate, in Fleet Street.

With Twelve Splendid Coloured Illustrations and Forty Superior Wood Engravings.

This will form one of the handsomest and cheapest Editions of Bunyan ever published.

"The special excellences of the Book Society's Edition of Bunyan consist in its typography and pictorial illustrations. It is printed in a fine, bold, and remarkably clear type—one of the largest that has ever issued from the press, in these days at least. The plates are well chosen, and possess a good deal of character. Altogether this is one of the best issues of Bunyan's immortal work which we have seen. To weak or old eyes it would be a treasure indeed, nor will it be less attractive to the young."—Record.

ELAINE, BY ALFRED TENNYSON, ILLUSTRATED BY GUSTAVE DORÉ.

With NINE exquisite full-page DRAWINGS, engraved on Steel, in the first style of art, by J. H. Baker.

The designs of this Artist have never yet been engraved on steel, and consequently have never been interpreted in their fullest sense. M. Doré has made these drawings with special reference to this mode of engraving, and it was at his earnest request that the Publishers determined to incur the great outlay necessary to produce this book. It is also the first time that M. Doré has illustrated the works of a contemporary author, and, to use his own words, he desires the work "TO BE A MONUMENT TO MR. TENNYSON AND TO HIS OWN POWERS."

"Mon frère a fait cette fois-ci le grand succès qui fera descendre son nom à la postérité."

MR. BUCHANAN'S POEMS.

Just published, small 8vo, 5s.

LONDON POEMS.

By ROBERT BUCHANAN.

"There is something very graceful in every one of these dozen 'London Idyls,' and it is the grace of thorough completeness and proportion—the sound mind in the sound body—so far superior to any mere polish or trick of style. Several are exquisitely touching."—Church and State Review, August 3rd.

"We hardly know of any narrative poetry greater than is found in some of these sad and mourning lines. These verses have lived before they were written down."—Athenæum, July 21.

"What Wordsworth calls 'the power of hills' is on him, and the glory of nature gives a sweetness, a melody, and a melancholy to his verses. . . . In their way some of the finest poems of the present generation. . . . No volume has appeared for many years in London which so certainly announces a poetic fame."—Spectator, July 28th.

"As a poet combining simplicity with pathos, and a wonderful talent for giving to his subjects the forms of reality and life, Mr. Buchanan is unsurpassed. Among contemporaries and recent writers he is unequalled."—Court Circular, July 23th.

"They are in their subject so pathetic—so repelling, one might almost say; in their realism so pre-Raphaelite; and yet in their poetic treatment so delicately and tenderly artistic, that one cannot choose but wonder and admire, and be sad over them."—Morning Star, July 30th.

"The design of the poet—a most noble and beautiful design—becomes distinctly visible as soon as we have got over the first impression of wonder at the largeness of his intelligence, his power of dramatic individualization (so to speak), the beneficent daring with which he paints, the generous humanity of his painting, and the originality of his music. . . . The writings of Mr. Buchanan, however, present to the most careful, as well as to the most superficial observation every 'note,' and characteristic of the true poet; and when we observe how flexible are his sympathies with all that is human, we may well slide into the adjective alarming in speaking of such a poet. If this is only the 'spring' of the arch, what is its course to be? We may well rejoice, meanwhile, in the prospect that we are to have a very great poet."—Illustrated Times, August 18th.

NEW BOOKS.

ARNE:

A Sketch of Norwegian Peasant Life.

By BJÖRNSTJERNE BJÖRNSON.

Translated by AUGUSTA PLESNER and SUSAN RUGELEY POWERS.

Post 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"We know of nothing more beautiful than some of these stories. What originality, purity, and simplicity—what poetry! His heroes are peasants, his heroines peasant girls; but how happy we feel in their society—how deeply interested in what they say and do! The characters described are so true to nature, so real, that you seem to feel their presence, and fancy them old acquaintances after a few strokes of the pen. With M. Björnson a new era begins in Scandinavian literature."—Athenæum.

"'Arne' is one of Herr Björnson's late compositions, and a sweet, simple idyl it is—a strain of rustic music from beginning to end. The most delightful sketches of Norwegian life and character."—London Review.

COSAS DE ESPAÑA:

Illustrative of Spain and the Spaniards as they are.

By MRS. WILLIAM PITT BYRNE,

Author of "Flemish Interiors," &c.

With Illustrations, 2 vols. 21s.

"We strongly commend to all who wish for accurate and full information respecting the public and private life of Spain this book of Mrs. Byrne's. Nothing escapes her keen scrutiny. . . . She gives such glimpses of the domestic life of Spaniards as only a woman could give, and such as are hardly equalled by her own 'Flemish Interiors.'"—Daily News.

"Mrs. Byrne's two volumes are readable, useful, and nicely illustrated. There are in them a fulness and minuteness of detail which are wanting in other words on the same subject, and which will, therefore, be all the more appreciated."—Illustrated London News.

TRADE AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

PROSPECTS OF THE SEASON, 1866—67.—The next number of the BOOKSELLER will contain our Annual Notice of Books promised, or likely to appear during the forthcoming season. For the purpose of making this as complete as possible, we shall be obliged by Advertisers sending their lists early in October.

Some alterations have been made in the business of the Messrs. Virtue, who will in future confine their attention to their own publications. It was, we believe, at one time in contemplation to sell the books known as "Weale's Series," and arrangements were in progress to transfer those books, and some others, to Messrs. Tinsley Brothers, but the very day when the bargain was to be closed, Mr. Edward Tinsley's sudden death put a stop to the transaction.

BOOKS FOR SALE.—This department of the BOOKSELLER was intended for the use of subscribers who had overbought, who had had good books thrown upon their hands, or who had become possessed of good or rare books unsaleable in their own localities. Many persons appear to have mistaken the intention, and have sent us most absurd lists. Every month we have had to reject scores of books, and at the same time have admitted many that do not come within the scope of the list. Some revision is therefore necessary; and, in future, there will be no limit as to the number of books, but a charge of sixpence will be made for the first, and threepence for each succeeding one—the description, if possible, not to exceed one line. Stamps must accompany the list, or no notice whatever will be taken of it.

In our last number we stated that Mr. Willis, who had retired from the firm of Messrs. Willis and Sotheran, 136, Strand, would recommence business as an auctioneer. This, by a letter in the present number, it will be seen is incorrect. Mr. Willis's eldest son, in partnership with Mr. Humm (formerly cashier to Messrs. Southgate & Barrett), will commence the business of auctioneers in the well-known house in Fleet Street.

MESSRS. H. H. BANCROFT & Co., of San Francisco, have opened a London agency at No. 10, Warwick Square, Mr. Bancroft having come to London for the purpose of making arrangements with the English trade with the view of opening up direct communication between both countries.

Mr. Page informs us that he has recently sold the business of Mr. Clare, Westerham, Kent, to Mr. Jewell, of 101, Great Russell-street; and Mr. Rahill's trade, of Red Lion-street, Holborn, to Mr. Brocknell, from Mr. H. Morrell's.

Mr. Holmes has recently sold the old-established business belonging to Mr. Sydenham, 104, Edgware-road, to Mr. Isacke.

During the past year the following members of the Stationers' Company have died—Mr. Thomas Gardiner, wholesale stationer, Newgate-street; Mr. Andrew Spottiswoode, Queen's printer; Mr. William Farlow; Mr. James W. Adlard; Mr. Patrick Martin, formerly of the firm of Cuthell and Martin, Middle-row, Holborn; Mr. John Bleaden, formerly of Lothbury; Mr. Alexander Black, formerly of the firm of Black and Armstrong, foreign booksellers; Mr. George Metcalf; Mr. Edward M. Thomson; Mr. William Harrison; Mr. Thomas R. Steel; Mr. Frederick Waller, at one time in business in Fleet-street; Mr. George H. Virtue, of Amen Corner.

In the notice of Mr. Delf, which appeared in our last number, it was incorrectly stated that a few months before his death he had a considerable share in the production of "The British Workman," instead of which it should have read "The Working Man."

PARIS.—Mr. Louis Bréton, one of the partners of L. Hachette and Co.'s, and President of the "Cercle de la Librairie, de l'Imprimerie et de la Papeterie," has been created a Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur; as also Mr. Charles Demourgues, Judge at the "Tribunal de Commerce de la Seine," and Member of the Cercle de la Librairie, &c.; both on recommendation by the Minister for Agriculture, Commerce, and Public Works.

Mr. McKie, of Kilmarnock, is about to issue a reprint of the original Kilmarnock edition of Burns' Poems, as published in 1786. It is to be published by subscription.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—An interesting and useful feature in the Exhibition of 1867 will be a collection of English newspapers, reviews, magazines, and other periodical publications. The variety and excellence of these will, no doubt, take our continental friends by surprise. The suggestion appears to have come from South Kensington, and has consequently been sneered at by those who think no good can come out of the "boilers." We have ourselves never been warm admirers of the Science and Art Department, but in this instance think its conductors have shown considerable judgment, and recommend our readers to co-operate heartily in promoting the object in view. What is required is a single copy of every magazine, review, and journal published in the United Kingdom, within the present year. These should be sent directed to Messrs. Francis and Adams, 59, Fleet Street, marked outside, "Collection of Literature for the Paris Exhibition."

THE CAMBRIDGE PRESS—we mean that in America—has issued a Prayer-book, "according to the use in King's Chapel, Boston," which, for beauty of typography, far surpasses any book printed at either of the authorised presses in this country, and we think we may pronounce it to be the best printed book ever issued in America, even being an improvement upon the Life of "Prescott," from the same office. It is printed in red and black upon toned paper. The brilliancy of the red ink, combined with the evenness of colour throughout, exhibit an amount of care and attention seldom equalled. We shall be glad to find our own authorised printers competing with their transatlantic brethren; but this we hardly dare hope for in the production of Bibles and Prayer-books, as profit appears to be the thing in view, and not reputation.

✱ Messrs. Rivington announce an elegant presentation edition of the "Book of Common Prayer." Every page is surrounded by a handsome wood-cut border, each section being marked by mediæval ornaments. The book is printed on toned paper, by Messrs. Clay.

Oxford and Cambridge, although still falling short of excellence, are competing in the production of Prayer Books, considerably in advance of their previous editions. That of Cambridge is in 12mo, printed in double columns, with rules interspersed, reminding us of some of Baskerville's editions ruled by hand. The Oxford edition is printed in a kind of church-text, a type cast expressly for the Oxford Press, and the edition is described by the publishers as "beyond all others adapted for presents to young people."

Roby's Traditions of Lancashire, one of the forthcoming books announced by Messrs. Routledge and Sons, has met with an almost unprecedented success. It is out of print before the day of publication, every copy having been ordered by booksellers and private buyers in the Palatinate. We thought Mr. Roby and his labours almost forgotten, but there appears to have existed that strong feeling of attachment which genius always inspires, and which time cannot kill; this recollection has caused so great a demand for the new edition of his works, that an advance upon the publishers' price is already being offered for large paper copies. As there must still be a demand for the book outside Lancashire, and probably some unsatisfied claims within also, it is to be hoped that the publishers will lose no time in putting a new edition to press.

THE "TIMES" SCALE FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE SIXPENNY WAVERLEY.—Mr. Hotten has issued the first portion of his cheap reprint of the Waverley Novels; six volumes, being as many complete works, are now ready. They are well printed on fairly good paper, and, we understand, have met with an extraordinary amount of success. Messrs. Black, of Edinburgh, we perceive, also announce a sixpenny edition. Mr. Hotten's are printed from the original editions, while Messrs. Black's will have the author's latest notes.

From Messrs. Hamilton we have received a neat little box of little books—ten volumes of "Daily Prayers," "Evening Voices," "Noontide Helps," "Morning Vows," &c., &c., each volume printed on toned paper and bound in cloth, and the ten volumes in a glazed bookcase, retailing at five shillings.

FAMILIAR WORDS.—Smarter under the remarks in our last number the Editor of "Familiar Words" has been injudicious enough to print and circulate what he intended to be a defence of his book and of himself, but in the first place, he objects to the quarter whence the criticism came. Had it been the Times, or the Saturday Review, or one of the Quarterlies, he could have borne it; but to have his shortcomings pointed out in the pages of the BOOKSELLER, was an indignity past endurance, therefore his wrath kindled, and he fulminated a reply. "The BOOKSELLER," he says, "has gone out of its way to attack this book. And I am told by publishers * * * that a similar spiteful article appeared some time since against one of Dr. Smith's Dictionaries." This statement was so astounding, that we wrote to Mr. Friswell, to be furnished with the name of any one publisher who had given the information. To this he replied, that he was "advised at present to retain the names of his informants in whose verba ipsissima the note on Dr. Smith's dictionaries stands in his circular. They are members of the first firms in London." We wrote again, telling him, that as no article, good or bad, or, in fact, any notice whatever, of Dr. Smith's Dictionaries having at any time appeared in the BOOKSELLER, we must be allowed to doubt the statement that any publisher could have given him the information. This brought another reply, in which Mr. Friswell says, that the malicious statement we objected to was not written by him at all, but was the handiwork of some one else, and that he endorsed it in full confidence of its truthfulness. This we fully believe.* Whether the apology or reply itself will satisfy his friends or not, is no business of ours. The point upon which Mr. Friswell appears to insist is, that all compilers do as he did, i. e., appropriate the labours of others. This is to some extent true; but the works of this nature compiled by his predecessors—Messrs. Gent, Grocott, Bartlett, and Miss Preston—would have shown him that something more than paste and scissors had been used, or, as that gentleman's name has been mentioned, we may refer him to Dr. Smith, whose useful dictionaries are models of correct, honest, laborious, and intelligent compilation, creditable alike to the publisher, the editor, and the contributors; in short, being in every respect the very antipodes of Mr. J. Hain Friswell's volume of "Familiar Words." Had this book been so compiled, it would have received nothing but praise in the pages of the BOOKSELLER.

ILLUMINATED TEXTS.—We have received from Messrs. Warne & Co. a copy of the Lord's Prayer illuminated, which we commend to our readers' notice as one of the most pleasing and successful specimens of the art. It is the size of an open sheet of foolscap, and is printed on cardboard. Framed and glazed, it is suitable for the most elegant drawing-room, while the price (1s. 6d.) enables every parent to place a copy in the nursery or over the cottage fire-place.

JOHN LEECH.—Admirers of the late John Leech will be glad to hear that Mr. Tegg has published a volume containing fifty etchings by this talented artist, selected from the illustrations to "Jack Brag," "Christopher Tadpole," and "Hector O'Halloran."

* It is but fair to Mr. Friswell to say that at the moment of going to press, we have received a note expressing his regret at having circulated a statement which he is now satisfied is untrue. Had this arrived earlier, we would have referred to the occurrence differently.

CHILDREN'S TOY BOOKS.—In no branch of art has there been such a rapid improvement as in the illustration of children's toy books. It was but three or four years ago that any design, however much it outraged all notions of drawing or perspective, was thought good enough for juveniles, provided a sufficient quantity of red, blue, green, and yellow colour was daubed, or rather stencilled on; in fact, such designs and colouring as would now be rejected for wall paper. The advance was rapid, and whether we have now arrived at perfection or not it is hard to say, but certain it is that the books recently issued by Messrs. Warne & Co. leave little to be desired. Correctly drawn, and brilliantly printed in colours by Kronheim, the letter-press well selected, and cheap withal, they are considerably in advance of all others. We refer especially to the "Aunt Louisa" series, to which several additions have been made; one of them—"Johnny Gilpin"—is exactly what such a book should be. We even fall in love with Mrs. Gilpin ourselves, and do not wonder at the affection displayed by the worthy citizen; while she, on her part, had such confidence in her husband, that she selected the most charming of waiting-maids to attend upon him. Each of the pictures in "Edith and Milly's Housekeeping" is worth the price of the whole book, and well deserves a frame and glass. Some capital additions have also been made to the sixpenny series.

PENNY READINGS.—From Messrs. Cassell we have the prospectus of an illustrated series, to be published weekly, under the editorship of Tom Hood. The pieces will be selected from the writings of standard authors, living and deceased. From Messrs. Routledge we have a volume of "Original Penny Readings," by George Manville Fenn, consisting of sketches contributed by him to the Evening Star, Once a Week, and other serials. The volume may possibly have some attraction to readers who prefer current literature to the riches of the past. Mr. J. E. Carpenter, who was, we believe, the originator of this literature, has just issued a new volume. It contains a few good pieces from standard authors, but is disfigured by a large number of bad ones, some of the pieces being selected from authors unknown to fame, and deservedly so; others from claqueurs of the press, who, pleased to see their own names in print, will, without doubt, praise Mr. Carpenter for the excellent judgment he has shown in making the selection.

CHRISTMAS STATIONERY.—Mr. Canton, taking time by the forelock, has provided an extraordinary variety of complimentary Christmas stationery. We say complimentary, but many will be considered quite the reverse; as for instance, where a volunteer is told not to forget the baby, or where a horrid fright is told to bring her music with her. Most of the cards, envelopes, and note papers are very pretty; some might even take their places as works of art. Perhaps the most attractive will be the Chinese puzzles, consisting of elongated letters. One is a conversation between two hands, the gentleman saying, "Will you accept if I offer it?" to which the lady very promptly responds, while offering her own, "You may take it if you dare."

DUMAS' NOVELS.—Messrs. Routledge and Sons are issuing the works of this celebrated French writer in volumes, each containing a complete novel, for a shilling. So successful has been the publication, that the whole impression of the first, The Three Musketeers, was disposed of before the end of last month.

From time to time we have announced cheap editions from standard authors, to which we have prefixed the terms "wonderful," "marvellous," &c., until we have no adjective left to describe a book announced by Mr. Hotten, which is nothing less than a complete edition of Shakspeare, including the poems and doubtful plays, with a biography and glossary, edited by one of our most competent Shakspearian scholars (Mr. Hallewell), for one shilling. How it can be done for that money passes our comprehension. The same publisher also announces a "Library of World Wide Authors," one of the happiest titles we have ever met; the selection will consist of the best works of Fielding, Smollett, Victor Hugo, Lamartine and other authors whose names are "World Wide" in their fame.

The first part of the coloured edition of Cassell's large Map of London has just been issued; it is constructed on a larger scale than any other, and appears to have been completely revised. Even the Holborn Viaduct, the site of the new Courts of Justice, and other improvements, which are so rapidly altering the character of the city, being all included. So rapidly are these alterations taking place, that a map two years old is almost out of date, and whether we look east, west, north, or south, we find on this map indications of forthcoming changes as great as any of the past.

KING'S INTEREST TABLES.—Another edition of this invaluable and laborious work has been issued by Mr. Tegg, who has effected some improvements, which even "Joseph King, of Liverpool," himself would be pleased with. In the pages of tables every tenth amount has been distinguished by bolder figures, so that at a glance the eye rests upon the sum sought. Appended are Tables of Foreign Monies, with their equivalents in English; also Tables of Foreign Weights and Measures, and Stamp Duties; prefixed is a Table showing how the calculations in the Book are to be made. The volume, a good thick octavo, well printed on fine thick paper, strongly half bound in calf for counting-house use, is retailed at nine shillings.

Mr. Tegg has also recently published a wonderfully cheap compact and well-printed Shilling Dictionary, "Walker and Webster Combined," edited by Dr. Longmuir, a gentleman already favourably known for his lexicographical labours. "Lockhart's Life of Napoleon," which was always a favourite in the original Family Library Series, now makes its appearance as a portly crown 8vo. volume, at five shillings, in a cover enriched with the Emperor's golden bees, and with the original illustrations by Cruikshank. Few books are so acceptable to boys as the life of a warrior. To the elegant little Cabinet Series of two-shilling volumes the recent additions are, Washington Irving's "Life of Columbus," and the "Voyages of the Companions of Columbus," a sequel to the former; both volumes of daring and adventure, told by a masterly hand; and, lastly, we have a charming volume of Scottish Songs and Ballads, edited by Ritson, one of the most learned antiquaries this country has produced, whose judicious notes have been preserved almost intact. To the illuminated series of children's books the additions are, "The True Story of the Deluge and Noah's Ark," and the "True Story of Abraham the Father of the Faithful." Henry Smith's Sermons, in two volumes, are a valuable contribution to theological literature. "Mr. Smith," says Thomas Fuller, "was commonly called the 'silver-tongued preacher,' and that was but one metal below

St. Chrysostom himself. His church (St. Clement Dane's) was so crowded with auditors that persons of good quality brought their own pews with them—I mean their legs to stand thereupon in the alleys; their ears did so attend to his lips, their hearts to their ears, that he held the rudder of their affections in his hand, so that he could steer them whither he was pleased, and he was pleased to steer them only to God's glory and their own good." Such having been the effect of Mr. Smith's preaching, the clergy of the present day who complain of the inefficiency of pulpit preaching, will, by a careful study of the sermons contained in these two volumes, be able to judge whether the fault is so much on the part of their hearers as in the want of proper preparation and study in themselves. Lastly, we have a shilling "Handy Book on the Law relative to the Sale and Purchase of Horses; comprising notices of the chief statutes and decisions thereon, collated to the present time; and the Leading Cases on Warranties; with a Copious Index and Table of the Authorities Cited, and Observations on Letting, Hiring, and Driving Horses, &c. &c. by Charles Egan, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow Commoner of Trinity Hall, Cambridge." The title page, which we have copied, fully, explains the nature and object of this little volume.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW MAGAZINE, "The Belgravia," will make a start under difficulties, having already appeared in the Court of Chancery. About two years ago Messrs. Hogg and Sons registered at Stationers' Hall, "Belgravia," as the title of a magazine which they intended to publish. Of this no one appears to have been aware, and Miss Braddon's magazine was announced and advertised, and show-cards and bills sent out in all directions, in order to make it known. This week, however, to the surprise of nearly everybody, Messrs. Hogg issued their first number under the title of "Belgravia," a magazine of fashion and amusement, monthly, with illustrations." Thereupon Mr. Maxwell, the proprietor of Miss Braddon's magazine, moved the Court of Chancery for an injunction to restrain Messrs. Hogg from proceeding with their magazine. On his behalf counsel urged that although Messrs. Hogg had registered the title, they had no intention of proceeding further, that he had been at considerable expense in ignorance of their assumed right, and that it would be unjust if they were allowed to benefit by the expenses he had been at in making the title known. They, on the other hand, urged that they registered the title with the full intention of proceeding with the publication; but, from various causes, had delayed doing so until the present time; in proof of which they produce the first number, a copy of which was before the court. To this averment it was replied, that the specimen of the magazine before the court was little more than a "dummy," being made up of sheets and illustrations, originally intended for some other magazine. No decision was come to, the case being reserved for consideration.

Messrs. Rivingtons have commenced their series of Classical School Books by the publication of a large-type Greek Testament, without notes, edited by the Rev. Thomas H. Candy. When a new edition is called for, we would recommend the publishers to use a somewhat thicker paper, as some provision should be made for the havoc caused by boys' thumbs. In other respects, including type and binding, the book is everything that could be wished.

A new edition of that very remarkable book, "The Directorium Anglicanum," by the Rev. Frederick George Lee, has just been published by Mr. Bosworth. It is beyond our province to criticise this volume; were we even to describe it at any length, we should probably bring down upon ourselves a shower of letters from indignant readers of the Record on the one hand, and, on the other, be told by our High Church subscribers that we were handling a subject about which we knew nothing. We may, however, be permitted to say, that the volume exhibits a wonderful amount of reading on the part of its editor, who appears to have exhausted the writings of all authors, ancient and modern, who may be cited as ritualistic authorities; and as no criticism is equal to success, we may presume from the fact of two editions having been sold within a short time, and a third being now called for, that the book is a very excellent one. The full title is "The Directorium Anglicanum, being a manual of directions for the right celebration of the Holy Communion, for the saying of Matins and Evensong, and for the performance of other rites and ceremonies of the church, according to the ancient use of the Church of England. With plan of chancel, and illustrations of such ornaments of the church, and of the ministers thereof, at all times of their ministration (as) shall be retained and be in use as were in this Church of England, by the authority of Parliament, in the second year of the reign of King Edward the Sixth. Third edition. Edited by the Rev. Frederick George Lee, D.C.L., F.S.A. Lond. and Scot.; S.C.L. Oxon; F.A.S.L., Chaplain to the Right Hon. the Earl of Morton, &c." The price is 12s. "without discount."

From Messrs. Routledge we have received a copy of their new edition of Burns' Poems, uniform with Longfellow, and forming a new volume of the elegant little two-shilling series of books issued by this house. Two new volumes of the Railway Library—"Gilderoy," a Scottish tradition, by Robert S. Fittis. In this work the author has attempted to do for Gilderoy, "Bonnie Boy" of the popular ballad, what Sir Walter Scott did for another cateran, "Rob Roy." The other, a shilling volume, an original work, by Louisa M. Alcott, entitled, "Moods." A Handy-Book of Cricket, by Edmund Routledge, and by the same author, "Everyday Blunders in Speaking," an amusing little volume, which we commend to the notice of our London subscribers, while even our Inverness friends who tell us they speak better English than we do at home, may in this little book find a few hints by which they may make themselves understood when they come to London. "How to Cook Potatoes in a Hundred Different Ways." Another useful sixpenny manual is by Dr. Lankester, "Cholera: What is it, and how to Prevent it;" a little volume brimful of common sense, which should be circulated by the thousand. Of a different character to any of the preceding, is, "A Manual of Weathercasts," by Andrew Steinmetz, who appears to be a sort of modern Murphy; but we doubt the probability of his clearing £7,000 by this book, as Murphy did by his almanack, this appearing to be but little more than a number of cuttings strung together for the convenience of those who wish to have the work in parts. Messrs. Routledge have divided Mr. Carpenter's Song Book into four sixpenny parts. Lastly, we have an excellent "Commercial Letter-Writer," by Mr. P. L. Simmonds; the examples given appear to be from actual letters, plain, sensible, and business-like.

The Children's Hour Annual. (Johnstone, Hunter & Co., 5s.)—A nicely illustrated volume which we can strongly recommend to the notice of parents and others, desirous of placing in the hands of their children an illustrated volume of great and varied interest, and at the same time of an evangelical tendency. Stories, fables, and narratives are intermingled with poetry, chapters of natural history, travels, and incidents, the whole forming a volume which children will prize, and over which they may spend many a happy hour.

FEMALE POETS.—The late Rev. F. J. Stainforth, incumbent of a church in Mark Lane, employed himself for many years in the collection of poetry by female writers, and gradually got together between five and six thousand volumes. Many of these, as may be supposed, are of little value in themselves, but as a whole they form a collection which we would be glad to see kept together, although the dispersion of such a library enables collectors to possess many rare and covetable books. Inside a large number of volumes Mr. Stainforth has made notes of a biographical and bibliographical nature, and therefore, unlike his predecessor, Mr. Heber, he was something more than a mere collector.

CITY BIOGRAPHY.—Mr. R. B. Orridge, a member of the Court of Common Council, has issued a little pamphlet, pointing out the want of a comprehensive Biographical Dictionary of Eminent Londoners. He suggests that, amongst other works of Londoners, the city schools, Rugby, Tunbridge, and nearly a hundred other grammar schools, were founded by citizens, and that these works alone deserve commemoration. An abundance of materials are in existence in the City Muniment Room and elsewhere; and that if people generally knew the good deeds performed by citizens in all ages, it would prevent the sneers so frequently expressed for Cockneys. We wish Mr. Orridge success in his work. Mr. Riley, in the "Liber Albus," has shown us that some of the city archives are not only full of information, but that they are also full of interest, and throw much light upon our general history.

Mr. Hotten, the well-known antiquarian bookseller of Piccadilly, and one of the most intelligent members of the trade, has recently issued a volume of more than ordinary interest, "The History of Signboards from the earliest times to the Present Day." It is the joint work of himself and Mr. Jacob Larwood, and is illustrated with a hundred cuts drawn by the latter. At first sight it would scarcely be supposed that the study of signboards could afford much amusement, but the contrary is the fact; and few books will be found better worthy of perusal than this. In the present days signs are generally confined to inns and pawnbrokers; but no one can pass through any old city without observing relics of the past, when every shopkeeper had his distinguishing badge. Messrs. Hoares, in Fleet Street, still retain the Leather Bottle over their door, and in the window of their neighbours, the Messrs. Goslings, may be seen the Three Squirrels: even in Paternoster Row the Ship and Black Swan may be seen over the doorway of Messrs. Longman's new premises, Baldwin's sign of the Rose may also be seen at Messrs. Chambers', and the northern origin of Messrs. Blackwoods' traced by means of the thistles which flourish about their windows; further east may be observed old signs built into houses, and on the vane of the Royal Exchange, the Grasshopper of Sir Thomas

Gresham still tells which way the wind blows. Many of these signs, dating from an ancient period, remain intact; others, again, have been altered in the most absurd manner—such as The Bacchanals, which has been transformed into the Bag o' Nails, and the Boulogne Mouth, which now figures as the Bull and Mouth. The compilers of this volume appear to have overlooked the inscription beneath the sign. We give it:—

"Milo, the Cretonian, an ox slew with his fist,
And ate it up at one meal:
Ye Gods, what a glorious twist."

Many a story of the past may be learnt from the signboards still scattered about. The Bear and Ragged Staff, the insignia of the Earls of Warwick, still lingers in the neighbourhood of Warwick Lane. The Royal Oak reminds us of King Charles, and the Thirteen Cantons tell of the time when the Protestant Swiss found a refuge in this country. To many of the old inns an interesting history is attached. Who can pass the Bell, in Warwick Lane, without thinking of the saintly Archbishop Leighton—or the Bell, at Edmonton, without thinking of Cowper's hero. Many of the signboards themselves are of interest; as, for instance, that celebrated one by Hogarth, still to be seen in Oxford Street, and of which a copy is given as a preface to this volume, "A Man loaded with Mischief," Mischief being represented by his wife, holding a glass of gin in one hand and pointing to a protuberance in his forehead with the other, a magpie and a monkey on his shoulders, and a padlock round his neck—a pretty load of mischief certainly! The volume is full of interest, but by no means exhausts the subject.

A BOHEMIAN MAGAZINE.—The Vagrant Club, whatever that body may be, is about publishing a Monthly Sixpenny Magazine, to be called Vagrant Leaves, which the projectors somewhat diffidently tell us "will have the advantage of illustrations by Concanen, and other celebrated artists. Original music will form another attraction. Such other features will be added from time to time as may secure to the publication the proud position it will at once modestly assume as the only readable periodical of the day." With No. 1 will be given the words and music of the "Song of the Vagrant Club," which is said to be exceedingly witty by the "vagrants," who sing it in chorus at their tavern.

From Sydney, N.S.W., we have a copy of the "Illustrated Sydney News," of July 16th, with a two-page illustration printed in colours, the engraving, drawing, and printing being all colonial work. The work is done in a manner creditable to all who have been engaged upon it, and fully equal to many of the coloured illustrations given with London papers.

Christian Society is the title of a new shilling monthly magazine to which we wish every success. The first number contains a well-written colloquy on books entitled "Evenings with Friends and Books"—"In the Country on an Autumn Sunday"—"The Religious Use of Travel"—"The True Site of the Holy Sepulchre," a paper of considerable value, illustrated by a number of diagrams—another on a subject but little studied, one of the rivals of Jesus, "The Pagan Christ, Apollonius," who is said to have performed miracles and to have done many wonderful things—a seasonable paper on Hymnology, and a number of other articles, go to make up a magazine which contains within itself all that promises success.

The Sunday Reader a new magazine of the "Sunday at Home" class, is edited by the Rev. Dr. Miller, a guarantee of its being soundly evangelical. It is issued both weekly and monthly, is well illustrated, and is attractive in other ways.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MR. FRISWELL'S "FAMILIAR WORDS."

To the Editor of THE BOOKSELLER.

SIR—My attention has been drawn to an article in the BOOKSELLER on the work by Mr. J. H. Friswell, entitled "Familiar Words," and having also seen Mr. Friswell's letter in reply, and heard that he refers to my book in the preface to his second edition, I feel it necessary to make a remark or two on the subject of "other books of quotations existing." The recklessness of Mr. Friswell (as exhibited in the preface to the first edition of his book of "Familiar Words") exceeds all bounds of decency, and all respect for other writers on his subject. He there asserts, that "those compilations generally are of large extracts taken haphazard, which give the name of the author only, and the reader is left to wade through one or two volumes, should he wish to verify a quotation."

Now Mr. Friswell ("having all his predecessors surrounding him"), has read, or ought to have read, the "Book of Familiar Quotations," published by Whittaker in 1852; "The Handbook of Familiar Quotations," published by Murray in 1853; my own "Index of Familiar Quotations and Parallel Passages," published in January, 1854: the third editions of two of the above works, and the second of mine, were out before he presumed to make the insinuation contained in the above extract. His first edition bears date in 1865, and the second I have not seen.

Had those reiterated publications escaped his notice? Few will believe so, I think; and yet, in the same preface, he has the barefacedness to state that, in his then present work, "an exact reference to the chapter, act, scene, book, and number of the line is given," leading the public to infer that such information had not been previously given, when he already knew, or despised what he did know, of the labours of others. This "plan," which he pretends to have originated, "cost him great labour and time;" whereas, it is no more his plan than that of a person who has pirated the invention of another. But Mr. Friswell has not yet done, for he believes "that no other work exists in the English language at once so copious and exact"! Upon what he founds his belief I know not. One has a right to expect he has founded it upon reading books of a like nature; and if he has not read them, then his belief is imperfect; he has deceived the public, and in attempting to exalt himself has miserably failed; but having seen them, he had seen "the act, scene, &c." there, before he wrote his preface. As already stated in the preface to my third edition, the merit of the improvement in the reference to each quotation belongs to the three works above named, and not to Mr. Friswell.

Besides the castigation he and his book have received in the Athenæum and in the BOOKSELLER, I may give another instance of his exactness and truthfulness, which appears in the same preface. He says, that "in order to make the body of the work itself an analytical index of its contents, certain prominent words which remain on the surface of the memory, have been placed in italics; thus Lord Rochester's line:—

'The best good man with the worst-natured muse,' will be found not only TWICE in the index, but under the italicised words in the body of the book."

Now I have, more than a year ago, and again on this occasion, looked under every word contained in that line, and I find that it is indeed in the body of the book and once in the index, under the title of "Best good man" only, but it is not twice in the index.

It is not in the index under any word except as above stated. So much for the confidence he reposes in himself. The italicised words in the body of his work can be the only "original plan" of his, even if that be so, of which I entertain a doubt.

Whether Mr. Friswell has made any use of my book without acknowledgment I cannot tell. We shall see. It has been hinted to me that he has.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN C. GROCOTT.

THE FIRM OF MESSRS. WILLIS AND SOTHERAN.

To the Editor of THE BOOKSELLER.

SIR—I was somewhat surprised to find, on looking over your last number, that you had inserted some information respecting myself altogether at variance with the real facts. It was not my intention to intrude upon the patience of your readers, but I think it right to give some slight explanation as to the motives which induced me to relinquish a business that had taken so many years to form.

I found during the past year my health so much impaired by a constant application of upwards of thirty years to that branch of business—the second-hand bookselling—that it became absolutely necessary to take some rest, and at the entreaties of my family I formed the determination to retire; the difficulty was how to do this, as to dispose of so large a business judiciously would have taken years.

My late partner, Mr. Sotheran—a younger man than myself—was naturally anxious that I should continue for a few years longer, but nothing could induce me to alter my determination; and, as a last resource, he (Mr. Sotheran) proposed to purchase my share, that he might continue the business for a time; and as I did not wish to disturb the assistants, to whom, from the long series of years we had worked together, I had become much attached, I resolved to sell my share, and by leaving the greater part of my capital in the business thus enable them to carry it on.

I have four sons—two of them under age—to whose guidance and progress in life I have determined to devote the remainder of my days; and the first step has been to place the eldest in business as an auctioneer, in partnership with Mr. Robert Humm, well known in the trade, and they will, during the month, commence business at 22, Fleet-street, the auction-room for many years occupied by Messrs. Southgate and Barrett; and as they will have at command some of my time and assistance, I hope to see established one of the most flourishing and best conducted auction-rooms, for the disposing of property in connection with literature and the fine arts, in London.

Your most obedient servant,

G. WILLIS.

A GLIMPSE OF ORIENTAL NATURE.

By a LADY. With a Preface by the Rev. G. R. GLEIG, Chaplain-General to Her Majesty's Forces. Handsomely bound, crown 4to, full gilt, 2ls. ; and 15s., cloth gilt.

HER MAJESTY, having seen the proof of the book, has ordered Four copies.

"This is the production of an invalid lady, who has whiled away the hours of her forced inactivity by drawing and painting subjects of natural history. She has chosen most interesting objects, and with the design, we should presume, of giving the dweller of a northern clime a just idea of the exact appearance of insect life and vegetation in the East, where she some time resided. To see these things in their dead state in the cases of a museum conveys but a shade of the reality to the mind. We are surprised, as we see them depicted in this book, at the beauty of the colours of the insects, and their peculiar appearance on leaf and branch. We never could have imagined their natural appearance from what we have seen before, and in the case of rare species, nuts and seeds, which are here coloured, with the full freshness of nature upon them; of course it would be quite impossible to realize the aspect without such aid as this. We are not exaggerating in saying the book contains an importation of a slice of Oriental nature as it exists. We only wish that our praise may induce the invalid to give us more and abundantly, and that it may gratify her to know that from her couch she can instruct the world, the grown-up world, though she dedicates her pencil's work, with unnecessary depreciation of her talent, to the younger branches of society."—Court Journal.

It cannot fail to be delightful to every child.

THE BOOK SOCIETY'S
BEAUTIFUL LARGE-TYPE
PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,
With Twelve Splendid Coloured Illustrations and Forty Superior Wood Engravings.

This will form one of the handsomest and cheapest Editions of Bunyan ever published.

"The special excellences of the Book Society's Edition of Bunyan consist in its typography and pictorial illustrations. It is printed in a fine, bold, and remarkably clear type—one of the largest that has ever issued from the press, in these days at least. The plates are well chosen, and possess a good deal of character. Altogether this is one of the best issues of Bunyan's immortal work which we have seen. To weak or old eyes it would be a treasure indeed, nor will it be less attractive to the young."—Record.

NICHOL'S SERIES OF STANDARD DIVINES.

(PURITAN PERIOD.—SECOND SECTION.)

THE PUBLISHER OF THE STANDARD DIVINES has much pleasure in annexing copy of a letter which the Editor has received from the Rev. Dr. Duff, who has made the Puritan Divines his special study. It will be seen that Dr. Duff prizes most highly the WORKS OF THOMAS BROOKS, now being issued.

THE GRANGE, 25th, June, 1866.

MY DEAR MR. SMITH,

I rejoice to find, that though Mr. James Nichol, the able and spirited Publisher of the incomparable Series of Puritan Divines, under your general Editorship, has been called to his rest, the Series is to be continued under his Son.

And I cannot help congratulating you on being able to commence the Second Section or Division of the Series with a volume of the works of so deservedly popular a writer as Thomas Brooks, the Author of "Precious Remedies against Satan's Devices," "Apples of Gold for Young Men and Women," "Heaven on Earth," "Paradise Opened," "A String of Pearls," "A Cabinet of Choice Jewels," "A Golden Key to Open Hidden Treasures," and other Treatises, characterised by a liveliness of fancy, a brilliancy of wit, an exuberance of illustration, an apt variety of learned references, a quaint felicity of expression, a skill in spiritual anatomy, a pungency of practical appeal—and all animated by the fervid zeal of sanctified genius—seldom equalled, and scarcely ever surpassed. The best cure for the Essay and Reviewisms, Colensoisms, and all the other wretched neologisms and rationalisms of our day, would be the careful and prayerful study of such inestimable works as those of Thomas Brooks, and the whole glorious company of our Old Puritan Divines.

Yours ever affectionately,

ALEXANDER DUFF.

LIBRARIES PURCHASED.

IMPORTANT TO SELLERS OF LIBRARIES.

Executors or Gentlemen having for sale Libraries of Books, either large or small, in town or country, or wishing to exchange the same for others, are respectfully reminded by the Advertisers, who have been long known as the most extensive Purchasers and Sellers of Books of every class in London, how much more advantageous it is for them to dispose of their property by private arrangement rather than trust it to the risks of a Sale by Auction. Willis and Sotheran are not only ready at all times to give the highest prices for Books, but they save the seller the delays and losses frequently arising from Sales by Auction; for it is notorious that in addition to the large expenses attending the latter mode, property, unless sold at particular seasons, is often unduly sacrificed. They also Value, Catalogue, Arrange, and Renovate Libraries either in town or country.

The Christmas Bookseller.

THE BOOKSELLER for November (issued about December 10) will contain a series of Illustrated Notices, describing the chief Books of the Season adapted for Presents. It will also contain some literary features of interest, besides numerous Illustrated Advertisements printed on toned paper, which will in various ways render it attractive to Bookbuyers, but more especially as a guide to the purchaser of BOOKS FOR PRESENTS, not only at Christmas, but throughout the year, as, in addition to the ordinary trade circulation, it finds its way into the drawing-rooms of wealthy bookbuyers in all parts of the world, and it may be safely affirmed that no illustrated volume is more carefully examined.*

No expense whatever is spared in the production of the CHRISTMAS BOOKSELLER, in proof of which, it may be mentioned that every copy of the issue for 1865 cost the proprietor at least two shillings; and, notwithstanding the large impression, it was out of print immediately.

In consequence of the time required for "getting up" the Illustrations, Advertisers will much oblige the Publisher by sending their copy early.

BOOKS WANTED.—Subscribers wishing to have their "Wants" inserted in the Christmas number must, with their copy, remit six stamps for every book to be advertised for. No notice will otherwise be taken of their "Wants."

THE BOOKSELLER is supplied, post free, to Subscribers of Five Shillings a year, which amount may be transmitted, either in Postage Stamps or by Post-office Order, payable at the General Post-office, to Mr. EDWARD TUCKER.

Advertisements inserted in THE BOOKSELLER are charged at the following rate:—Four lines, set close, in column, 3s., per line beyond, 6d.; six lines, set close, across the page, 10s. 6d., per line beyond, 1s. 6d.; page, 3l. 3s.; half-page, 1l. 16s.; quarter-page, 20s.; one-sixth, 14s. Displayed Advertisements, whether in column or across the page, are charged according to the space occupied.

To meet the views of the Retail Trade who may wish to circulate copies in their own localities as "THE CHRISTMAS BOOKSELLER," an additional number will be printed without any special reference to trade matters, and will be supplied to Booksellers, with their own Name and Address printed thereon, at the rate of one hundred for 50s., fifty for 30s., twenty-five for 17s. 6d. The price to the public will be 1s. for single copies, or 1s. 6d. if sent by post. Orders for copies must be received by the 15th November. No larger number than one hundred will be supplied to the same person; nor can the Publisher supply any at the above prices if ordered later than the day mentioned.

* "In the midst of this winter-wealth of Seasonable Books, commend us for a golden key to our golden treasures to The Bookseller, which furnishes the magic 'Open Sesame' to all our publications. The Bookseller may be described as the organ of the book-world of England. It contains complete lists of all new and standard works; it reveals the operations of the whole publishing trade every month; and it is, moreover, enriched by short articles of intelligence, interesting and valuable to all readers and lovers of books, and careful little notices of new works of importance. The Christmas Number is a marvel of matter, literary and artistic. All the Christmas books, without exception, are either recorded or described in its pages, which are made luminous by a rich selection of illustrations from the majority of them. Wherever you open The Bookseller, you come upon a piece of art or of literary news, in some shape, worth the whole cost of the number. We know of no independent publication which from its size, subjects, or the beauty of its typography and general arrangement, is more worthy of a place on the drawing-room table. All readers, to say nothing about purchasers, to whom it is indispensable, should possess The Bookseller."—The Home News.

TRADE AND LITERARY GOSSIP.

Mr. H. A. GLASS has retired from the well-known printing firm in St. Andrew's Hill, Doctors' Commons, to devote himself to literary labours. The name, however, of JUDD & GLASS will still be retained, and the business carried on by the remaining partner, Mr. JAMES JUDD.

Messrs. Walton and Maberly have removed their wholesale business from 27, Ivy Lane to 137, Gower Street.

Mr. Robert Anderson has given up his business at Shanklin and removed to 288, Commercial Road, Landport.

MISCHIEVOUS RUMOURS.—"Down at last!" These are the opening words of a letter lately received by one bookseller from another; and it would be false modesty to conceal the fact that they refer to a young publishing firm in London, with whose affairs rumour has been very rife of late. It gives us much pleasure to be in a position to give a direct contradiction to these rumours. The house referred to is sound at the core, and has every prospect of standing as long and as honourably as any house in the trade.

Messrs. Peel & Co., wholesale stationers, are removing from Castle Street, Falcon Square, to 66, Lant Street, Borough.

Mr. William Dickes has removed his colour printing and other business, from 5, Old Fish Street, Doctors' Commons, to larger and more commodious premises in Farringdon Road, Holborn.

Mr. Holmes informs us that he has recently transferred the business of Mr. Humby, Warminster (formerly in the hands of Mr. Tayer) to Messrs. Martin, proprietors of the Warminster Herald.

Mr. Edward Livingstone, South Bridge, Edinburgh, has taken his brother Stewart into partnership, and the firm will in future trade as E. and S. Livingstone.

Mr. Swinburne has replied to his reviewers in a little pamphlet of twenty-three pages, "Notes on Poems and Reviews, by Algernon Charles Swinburne," published by Mr. Hotten. Those who may be on the look-out for anything highly spiced with indecency or invective will find themselves disappointed; the reply is simply a calm, manly, and modest rebuke to his reviewers. The whole of Mr. Swinburne's books, it will be seen from an advertisement, are to be had from his new publisher.

The Commissioners for Public Education in Ireland, it will be seen, are advertising for tenders for Copy-books, with engraved headlines, for use in National Schools.

SHILLING ANNUALS.—Our advertising pages show that "Beeton's Annual" has been successful—that is, again announced by Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Co. Messrs. Cassell have another, Messrs. Routledge a third, an anonymous publisher a fourth, and Messrs. Warne also have a fifth: of this they have printed fifty thousand copies to start with—pretty well for a beginning.

DR. FAIRBAIRN'S IMPERIAL BIBLE DICTIONARY, a work which Messrs. Blackie have had in hand for more than seven years, is at length complete: it forms two handsome imperial octavo volumes, and contains several hundred illustrations.

THE RIVAL BELGRAVIAS.—We regret to say that the litigants have not come to terms. Cross bills have been filed, and both proprietors have issued their magazines. If the case goes on to trial, one important legal question will be settled, viz., the value of registration at Stationers' Hall; or, as it is contended, that mere registration is of no value whatever. We all know very well that a good title is of great value to a publication, and that, like every other species of property, it should be protected. Let us suppose that some persons dissatisfied with the BOOKSELLER should determine to start an opponent, to be called the "Publisher"; they register the title at Stationers' Hall, canvas the trade for support, advertise it liberally, go to other expenses, in order to make it known, and announce their intention of publishing on the 1st of January next. We, hearing all this, on the 15th of December bring out a publication with the same name, and, taking advantage of the publicity given by our opponents, set our PUBLISHER afloat. The Court of Chancery would surely prevent our proceeding, even though the other work had not been published at the time of registration. Or, let us suppose that intending ourselves to publish such a work, we register the title, but delay the production for a year. Meantime, some one else, learning our intention, issues such a work as we intended. Surely the Court would interfere on our behalf—especially if we could show that during the interval we had been making preparations for carrying it on. The mere entry alone would not perhaps be sufficient to prove our right, but it would very materially aid our cause. Another case is possible: when we commenced the publication of the BOOKSELLER we did so under the impression that no work with that title had ever before been projected. It might by some chance have happened that a year or more before, some one had really entered the BOOKSELLER as the title of a serial which he had projected; would he be allowed to interfere with our bond fide work?—we think not. The question now in dispute between Messrs. Hogg and Son and Mr. J. Maxwell will, if carried on, help to elucidate this question.

Miss Braddon's new magazine, Belgravia: a London Magazine, of which No. 1 has appeared, carries with it a conviction that it is a success. One hundred and twenty-eight pages of letter-press, with four full-page illustrations on toned paper are sufficient to show that the element of cheapness has been well considered. The fair editor contributes the first part of a story called "Birds of Prey;" this alone will be sufficient to attract a whole crowd of readers. No. II. is an amusing article on "Swells," in which after true Darwinian fashion that species is traced to its origin. No. III., "African Martyrology," by W. Winwoode Reade, a painful record of lives sacrificed in the pursuit of knowledge. No. IV., "An Adventurous Investigation." No. V., An Oxford Sketch, called "In the Schools Quad." No. VI., An amusing "Belgravian prose ballad," the refrain of which is, "I have still two daughters unmarried." No. VII., A short poem. No. VIII., "A Fireside Story told by the Poker." No. IX., "Market Street, Manchester," by George Augustus Sala, a paper exhibiting the peculiar talent of that versatile writer for writing entertaining papers on subjects about which he is not particularly well informed. No. X., "The Feast of St. Partridge at Park Hall." No. XI., "Slain at Sadowa," based upon an incident recorded in the Daily Telegraph. No. XII., "The Iron Casket: a Tale of the Travaux Forcés." XIII., and last, a little poem, "Love in November," by Mortimer Collins. If the next three numbers be as good as this, the success of "Belgravia" will be established.

Next we have Belgravia: a Magazine of Fashion and Amusement, published at the office, 9, St. Bride's Avenue, Fleet Street. This, we are informed in a slip, "was projected in the year 1863, and formally registered by the proprietors in the books of Stationers' Hall, in the month of October of that year." This magazine bears a strong family likeness to London Society, a serial which we have frequently mentioned in terms of commendation. A charming portrait of Lady Mary Fitzwilliam is given as a frontispiece.

GENUS IRRITABLE.—The Glasgow Citizen of the 25th inst. contains the following paragraph, headed "MR. ROBERT BUCHANAN:"—"Authors seem to have forgotten that their best weapons are those which they are most accustomed to wield, and that the public appreciate literary warfare far better than legal. If the reports which are current in certain circles be well founded, the law courts will have plenty to do before long in settling the disputes between various literary gentlemen of more or less reputation. First of all, Mr. Robert Buchanan—a poet of whose genius there can be no doubt—those, from motives of personal friendship and gratitude, to dedicate his last volume to Mr. Hepworth Dixon, of the Athenæum. The critic of the Westminster, who, being a poet himself, has, perhaps, a right to devote himself to 'the choking of singing birds,' chose to fall foul of this dedication, and to attribute 'sycophancy' to the poet, whereat are great wrath and a threatened lawsuit. The same plaintiff will appear in another action against Mr. Bentley, the proprietor of Temple Bar, for publishing his name as that of the author of a poem called 'Hugo the Bastard.' Mr. Buchanan does not deny his paternity, but as the piece is not a favourable specimen of his style, he thinks that he had a right to maintain his anonymity if he chose."

MR. CHARLES READE AND HIS AMERICAN CRITICS.—Some time since there appeared in the Round Table, a literary journal published in New York, a violent attack upon Mr. Charles Reade's new novel "Griffith Gaunt," which was appearing simultaneously in the pages of the Argosy and of the Atlantic Monthly. The charges brought against the novel and against the publishers for attempting to deprave the pure morality of the American people were very strong indeed, but as we have not read the novel, we are unable to say whether they were just or no. Mr. Reade thus summarises them:—1. That "Griffith Gaunt" was an indecent publication. 2. That it is immoral. 3. That like other novelists, the author deals in adultery, bigamy, and nameless social crimes. 4. But that unlike the majority of his predecessors, he sides with the crimes he depicts. 5. That the purity and modesty of women cannot survive the perusal of "Griffith Gaunt." 6. That this story was declined by some of the lowest sensational weekly papers of New York, on the ground that they did not dare to undertake the publication. 7. "Passing from personal to vicarious slander, he (the Ed. R. T.) prints the letter of an animal calling itself "G. S. H.," who suggests that some inferior writer wrote "Griffith Gaunt," and that I lent my name to it for a foreign market, and so he and I combined to swindle the Boston publishers: this in England we call felony." He (Mr. Charles Reade) thereupon reads the said Editor, whom he calls "Prurient Prude," a homily upon the canons of good taste; and, after defending himself, he further informs the Editor that he has commenced, or will commence, an action for slandering him and his "masterpiece," "Griffith Gaunt." Mr. Reade does not appear to be on better terms with some of his English friends, for the Globe of Oct. 24th says:—"We have received from Mr. Charles Reade a printed letter, in which he charges us with reviving and circulating a slander. Our readers may recollect that we commented on a characteristic letter which Mr. Reade wrote to an American journal, very severely castigating a critic who deemed 'Griffith Gaunt' 'indecent and immoral.' As we learnt that this had occurred from his own letter, reprinted in the Daily News, it is clear that the mention of the slander in this country was due to himself rather than to us. Mr. Reade assumes that we have received his novel for review, which is not the case; and he offers us three days in which to read the work, and to declare whether it is or is not indecent or immoral. Our reply is, that 'Griffith Gaunt,' when it reaches us, shall in due course be reviewed, although we cannot promise to give it precedence over works that may be more important; and that the critic shall be requested to give his opinion upon it."

SCOTTISH APPRECIATION OF WIT AND HUMOUR.—Sidney Smith says it requires a surgical operation to get a joke well into a Scotch understanding—a truism well exemplified in a recent number of the Scotsman, which, in noticing a review of Mr. Everett's clever book, "On the Cam," heads a paragraph—

"AMUSING INSTANCES OF THE IGNORANCE OF UNDER-GRADUATES.—Reviewing a book entitled 'On the Cam,' the Times says there is a peculiar flavour to a University man about under-graduates' ignorances. Judicious selections from little-go-papers are a favourite source of laughter. Mr. Don mentions the unpublished addition to the parable of the Good Samaritan. After repeating the Samaritan's saying to the innkeeper, 'When I come again I will repay thee,' the unlucky examinee added, 'This he said, knowing that he should see his face no more.' Our author gives us a candidate for his degree stating the substance of St. Paul's sermon at Athens to be crying out for the space of two hours, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians,' and another, when called upon to trace a connection between the Old and New Testament, referred to the circumstance that Peter with his sword cut off the ear of the prophet Malachi. But of those we have heard tell ourselves one of the neatest for its conception in this plain style of unhesitating faith is the description of the ascent of Elijah into heaven;—'And there came two she-bears out of the wood and said unto Elijah, Go up, thou baldhead, and he went up.' The fullest development of the combination of a good memory with an inferior sense of the traditional order is the account of the death of Jezebel. The examinee feeling sure of his ground, prefaced the account with the statement, 'It is most important to preserve the exact words of the sacred narrative,' and proceeded:—'And as he passed through the gate of the city, there looked out unto him two persons appointed for that purpose. And he said unto them, Throw her down. So they threw her down. And he said, Do it a second time. And they did it a second time. And he said, Do it a third time. And they did it a third time; and they did it unto seven times; yea, even unto seventy times seven. Last of all the woman died also. And they took up the broken fragments that remained, seven basketsfull."

These replies have been taken for literal specimens of the ignorance of young Englishmen studying for the ministry. What will our contemporary say to a reply made to ourselves when asking what was the second question in the Assembly's Shorter Catechism, the catechumen, a fine young Scotsman of about twenty, replied, "How's your poor feet?" Such ignorance [of first Presbyterian principles, displayed in Edinburgh, too, is truly awful. After this specimen of native ignorance, we hope our northern brethren will not again tread so hard upon our toes.

LIBEL ON MR. DICKENS.—The following paragraph going round: "Some time ago an article appeared in All the Year Round respecting Marylebone Theatre, which was spoken of in not too flattering terms. The manager, Mr.

Cave, concluding that the article was from the pen of Mr. Dickens, wrote a reply, which the great novelist maintains to be of a libellous character, and he has accordingly instructed his solicitor to bring an action against the writer.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.—The American Literary Gazette of Sept. 15 notices the very marked attention which English publishers pay to a juvenile magazine published by Messrs. Ticknor and Fields, called "Our Young Folks." "For instance," says the writer, "the initial article of the first number—Mrs. Stowe's 'Hum, the Son of Buz'—was immediately taken by Mr. Beeton for his 'Annual,' and Mr. Nimmo soon followed suit with two little books of stories, one entirely and the other principally derived from the first volume of the 'Young Folks.' Then the boys' magazines began a series of equally flattering attentions. The Boys' Journal' has drawn very largely from its American contemporary, having printed in its pages the serials, 'Farming for Boys,' 'Lessons in Magic,' and a number of detached articles. And now the 'Boy's Friend,' determined not to be behindhand in paying a graceful tribute to trans-Atlantic excellence, has copied two distinctive features of 'Our Young Folks'—'Round the Evening Lamp' and the 'Letter Box'—transferring bodily the wood-engraved titles and sundry of the illustrated rebuses, reprinting a variety of the puzzles, and finally appropriating the American editors' addresses to correspondents and contributors verbatim, literatim, et punctatim, with the exception of two or three verbal changes, which were absolutely essential to prevent a discovery of the American origin of the matter. We dare say that other instances might be quoted, but these are enough to show that England is quite as sharp as Yankeeedom after all in this little matter of appropriating the results of literary labour without acknowledgment; and though no doubt Messrs. Ticknor and Fields are glad to observe that their enterprise is so valued in England, yet they would probably be quite willing to receive the credit of their originality." We fear there is no remedy for this but an international copyright treaty. That will come some day we have no doubt, but it will be some time first; the Americans steal from us, and we from them. Our treasury is fuller than theirs, therefore they can steal more from us than we can steal in return. Some of these days they will discover that in order to encourage and foster native talent, it is necessary to respect the rights of aliens, for so long as English writers furnish gratuitously all, or nearly all, that the American public cares for, native writers will be treated with neglect.

A PROFANE TITLE.—Many sensitive persons have been shocked by the title of a book announced by Mr. Bentley, "Letters from Hell, by a Lost Soul." It is injudicious, to say the least of it, to run counter to the prejudices and feelings of the community, by repeating the names of places or things which are never mentioned to ears polite.

Too late for classification we received notice that Mr. A. W. Bennett will shortly add to his series of Gift-Books, illustrated by photography, two small volumes, "The Golden Ripple," by R. St. John Corbett, and a reprint of Whit-tier's last poem, "Snow-Bound." This latter work, although only published at the beginning of the year, has had an enormous run of success in America.

BARRITT'S IVORY HALF-GUINEA CHURCH SERVICE.—If our provincial trade subscribers who are in the habit of grumbling about badness of business, no profits, and those other things on which they wax eloquent, and find

"Words flow apace when they complain,
And fill the stationers' traveller's ear
With the sad tale of all their care,"

as the pretty little hymn says, or something like it; if they would refrain from this, and turn their attention to business, they might almost in any town or village make a nice round sum out of the Church Service of which a copy is now before us. We won't attempt to teach any one his business, but will confine ourselves to saying what a smart Yankee would do under similar circumstances, and how he would put money into his pocket. We, and probably most of our readers, and we may at a guess say ninety-nine out of a hundred of the general public, have been in the habit of looking upon an ivory-bound book as a livre de luxe—a book only for the use of the upper ten thousand, a book to be looked at and admired, one that might be presented on a wedding or birthday, or by a rich old god-parent; a gage d'amour, a token of remembrance, or in return for some politeness, or on some very special occasion; but that delusion exists no longer, and Messrs. Barritt must be regarded as fit aiders and abettors of John Bright and other innovators who insist upon giving poor people unheard-of comforts and luxuries. Here, then, we have a Church Service quite complete, printed by Her Majesty's printers in nonpareil type, with elegant ivory sides and gilt rims and clasp, selling for half-a-guinea. Now, reverting to our Yankee friend, and supposing him to be a bookseller in a country town, he would first order a supply; next he would quietly print a neat bill calling attention to the quality and cheapness of the book; then he would send these out to every one in the town, and in some instances send out the book itself,—the chances are, that in a village or town of 3,000 inhabitants he would sell 150 copies. In England we wonder how the Americans can get through such long numbers of books as they do; but booksellers there have brains, and know how to use them: they sell books by bringing them before people likely to purchase; they get full price, and many of them acquire fortunes. It is not our place to recommend English booksellers to do the same; but if money would be made out of a book like this Church Service in America, we see no reason why it should not be made here.

DORÉ'S DON QUIXOTE.—The most attractive book of the season that has yet reached us is Messrs. Cassell's edition of Don Quixote, with Doré's illustrations, a noble imperial quarto volume of about 750 pages, printed upon toned paper, handsomely bound, with gilt edges, for thirty shillings, a marvel of excellence and cheapness. As we purpose bringing it more fully before our readers next month, we can now do no more than announce the publication of the work.

HENRY SMITH'S SERMONS.—In our last we mentioned a cheap reprint of the Sermons of the "silver-tongued preacher," Henry Smith. Mr. Nichol now sends us the first volume of his library edition of the same author. In this form the work makes two handsome octavo volumes, which are issued in a neat binding, with red edges, for the moderate sum of 8s. 6d.

ART AND SONG, the title of the Christmas volume announced by Messrs. Bell and Daldy, gives but a poor notion of the book. The illustrations are on steel, and are of the most highly finished kind, engraved by Cousins, Goodall, and other first artists. Some of the designs are by Turner, and are from pictures which have never before been engraved. To the pictures Mr. Robert Bell has very judiciously wedded some of the choicest poems in the language.

Messrs. Bell and Daldy announce a new and revised issue of the Aldine Edition of the British Poets, in fifty-two volumes. When the late Mr. Pickering commenced the publication of this series, editorial duties sat very lightly upon the shoulders of many gentlemen whose names and reputations were thought sufficient guarantees for care and judgment, but unfortunately some of the volumes so "edited" owed little to any one but the printer. Still the Aldine edition has always been a favourite, and no collector of poetry could be satisfied without these books in his library; and after Mr. Pickering's death complete sets even at auction brought considerably more than publication prices. When Messrs. Bell and Daldy became proprietors of the copyrights they had the texts of the entire series revised. New lives of some authors were prepared, and wherever attainable, fresh matter was introduced. In Cowper, for instance, Mr. John Bruce enriched the memoir with a number of new and interesting facts, and was enabled to make some additions to the poems also. Spenser's works are reprinted from the library edition edited by Mr. Payne Collier. Chaucer has found a competent editor in the person of Mr. R. Morris. Churchill, one of the best edited of the series has had some revision at the hands of Mr. James Hannay, and all the others have been revised. In their own advertisement the publishers say that "having become sole proprietors of the copyright of this edition, they have endeavoured to give increased value to the new issue by a careful revision of the texts, by the correction of errors, and by the addition of any illustrative matter that recent literary investigation has provided. Nearly all the authors have undergone this revision, and for this purpose the services of the most competent editors have been secured. The publishers believe that the handiness of the size, and the elegance of the external appearance, and the care which has been taken to secure correctness and completeness, render this the best, most accurate, and most scholar-like edition that has yet been produced."

Bunyan's "Pilgrim" appears to be an inexhaustible mine of work for the printers, and of profit to the papermakers, and we hope to publishers also; not a month passes without a new edition making its appearance; the latest is one published at twopence, by Messrs. Cameron and Ferguson, of Glasgow; it is the full 32mo. size, and contains 255 pages. The same book is issued bound in cloth, at fourpence. Should Bunyan be found too heavy reading, the same publishers have provided a restorative, in their new serial, the "Sixpenny Novelette," No. 1 of which contains "The Secret League; or, the Mysteries of Alburn Hall," a highly sensational tale, much on a par with some of their other publications, of which "The Cavalry Scout; or, Old Guess Markham," a tale of the Siege of Richmond; "The Arkansas Ranger;" and "The Adventures of Sargeant Slasher" have reached us.

SCOTTISH TYPOGRAPHY AND ART.—We have received an early copy of Mr. Nimmo's new Christmas book, "Roses and Holly," of which the preface says, that "the entire artistic and mechanical work has been executed in the northern capital;" and that "the publisher puts it forth with some degree of confidence as a favourable example of art and typography." We think he may well be proud of his book. The typography, one of the best specimens we have seen of the Ballantyne press, is as nearly perfect as it can be; the paper a brilliant white, highly pressed, is no doubt of Scottish parentage; but the woodcuts, drawn and engraved by Scottish artists, are much superior to those which embellish most of our London books. In the first place, the artists have generally taken the pains to study their subjects; although occasionally we find a want of grasp; but generally the pictures tell their own tales, and, unlike many of those which will at once recur to the mind of the reader, they will not serve "a double debt to pay." The engraving is on the whole good, but unequal; some of the cuts are very well executed, others are only moderately well done. English printers and designers must look to it, or their business will travel northward.

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED PENNY READINGS deserve to be, and no doubt are, a great success. They are nicely printed and well illustrated; the pieces are all selected from the writings of standard authors, and are all good. Nevertheless, there is a drawback to their entire success. Some of the pieces are of no use for the purpose they are intended to serve, viz., as Penny Readings: e.g., the description of a Father's Death, p. 21; or that of a Moonlight Night, p. 33—they are useless for public readings. The publishers, too, would do better to omit the name of "Tom Hood" when they reprint the wrapper. Still, even with these drawbacks, the work will be a great success. We should not forget to mention that the publishers present each purchaser of Part I with a large woodcut of the Trial of Lord William Russell, which alone is worth the money charged for the whole.

Messrs. Dean and Son are preparing another of their funny red and black series of books. The pictures of this, like those of its predecessors, bear the initials of C. H. R. Some of the rhymes are quite as original as the pictures, and we may add, quite as good. These books have always been great favourites with children, their absurdities adding additional charms: but Messrs. Dean's novelties are their toy books, with the figures actually dressed in silks, printed cottons, leghorn hats, and satin neckties. The next advance will possibly be in making the pigs grunt, and the dogs bark.

Messrs. Low and Son have commenced the issue of their Christmas books, by the publication of "Dame Perkins and her Grey Mare; or, the Mount for Market," by Lindon Meadows, with coloured illustrations by Phiz. Pictures and poetry are alike good.

Messrs. Moses & Son, not satisfied with keeping a poet, have now engaged the services of an historian; the first fruits of his labours are before us, "A Popular History of London from the Invasion of Julius Cæsar to the Present Time. Part the First, from B.C. 55 to A.D. 1066." It consists of twenty three pages of readable matter, is entered at Stationers' Hall, the right of translation is reserved, and it is circulated gratuitously. Wonderful to relate, it smells less of the shop than many publications of a much more pretentious character.

DIARIES.—Swallows herald the approach of spring, blackberries ripen in autumn, and when Diaries are plentiful we may be sure that the new year is not far distant. Everybody now keeps a diary. Young ladies record their gushing feelings, married ladies treasure up their daily wrongs, and widows carefully take a note of all the offers made them. Men of business find them indispensable, both for the pocket and for the office. The old-fashioned pocket-book is dying out, but a fresh crop of diaries make their appearance every year. These are adapted for every requirement; for the waistcoat or coat pocket, for hanging against the wall, to lie open in the office, or shut up on the desk, for scribbling, or for permanent use.—Of the novelties for the present season we may notice Bemrose's Monthly Diary, a shilling packet of twelve little books for the waistcoat pocket, each containing 32 ruled pages, with printed headings.—A shilling Office Diary, large 8vo., with a week at each opening, published by Messrs. W. Brown and Co. Blackwood's Desk Diary, No. 4, also in 8vo., interleaved with blotting paper, containing a week on each page. The folio Scribbling Diary, from the same publisher, is on better paper than heretofore, and serves the double purpose of diary and blotting book.—Shaw's Improved Diary, (2s.), we do not remember to have seen before; the "improvement," we presume, is in the paper, print, and ruling, which are considerably above the average.—Messrs. Peacock publish a whole series of pocket diaries, neatly printed upon superfine writing paper, and bound in every variety of style, from one shilling to one guinea.—We should not omit mention of Messrs. Brown's Folio Diary (6s. 6d.), post size, well bound, one day to the page, forming an admirable day or cash book.—We may recommend to the notice of the trade Bemrose's Daily Calendar (1s.) This will have a large sale, and a specimen should be at once ordered by those who have not seen it. In our next we shall notice other diaries and pocket-books.

The Sunday Magazine, of which the second volume has just been completed, shows no signs of declension. It is, if anything, an advance upon the first. There is also good promise for the future. The author of "Studies for Stories" contributes a series of papers, "My Chosen Friends." George Macdonald contributes a series of "Marshmallow Papers." Dean Alford, Dr. Howson, Miss Sarah Tytler, John De Liefde and others, are also to assist the editor, Dr. Guthrie, who will himself furnish a series of "Studies from the Old Testament."

It will be seen that Messrs. Strahan announce the third and completing volume of their edition of the critical edition of the New Testament, a great improvement upon Bengel's "Gnomon," a work which for a century and a half has maintained its position amongst students, and now in its English dress will reach a large and intelligent class of the community, to whom in its original form it was useless.

A TWOPENNY ATLAS.—In our early days the "Use of the Globes" was one of the extrastacked on to the quarter's bill, but times have altered, and National School children learn the "use," with other things, at a penny a week. An "Atlas," too, was another of those "tacks" that paterfamilias regarded as a tax quite unnecessary. This state of things no longer exists, for atlases are now produced at a price that prevents grumbling. The cheapest of the kind is John Heywood's "Twopenny," containing ten nicely engraved maps, printed on foolscap 4to, and done up like a copy-book. In the hands of any less thriving publisher we should be disposed to ask the question, Will it pay?

We are not so well pleased with a "Mercantile Copy-book" from the same publisher. The forms of invoices, promissory notes, and cheques are all correct, but the style of writing is such that no penman would be expected to copy, and which no clerk who had his living to get would attempt to write. The examples set in all copy-books should be such that the copyer may imitate exactly. This simple rule is too frequently overlooked.

NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUM.—Messrs. Bemrose, of Derby, have just issued an Illustrated Album for Photographic Scraps, Engravings, Drawings, &c. The leaves, of stout tinted card-board, are printed in lithograph, with a variety of designs, each forming a framework, round, square, oval, or semi-circular, for the reception of the illustration. Being printed in colour the work is complete as it is, but any lady with a taste for drawing or painting would find no difficulty in adding to the enrichment of the volume, and thus making it the most attractive book on the drawing-room table.

From Messrs. Peacock we have an elegant demy quarto Bible, illustrated with large photographs of pictures by the old masters, and some of the modern German school. It is difficult to procure good engravings, but by this plan all the best pictures in the world are available. Some appropriate maps are also added.

Messrs. Nelson have issued a packet of Illustrated Texts: their artist is evidently imbued with the same love of art that prompted the monks of old to enrich many a Missal and Horæ. The groundwork of these is gold: in most gold is but one of the colours. The effect of this groundwork is very rich, and the other colours are in strict harmony.

NATURE AND ART.—The new magazine issued by Messrs. Day and Son is a work that deserves to succeed. Art requires not only to be cultivated, but to be constantly watered and cherished by frequent showers. A monthly journal which will do this, which shall periodically revive the tastes and offer suggestions to students ought to have a large and generous support.

We observe that Mr. Dicks is already in the field with a complete Shakespeare for one shilling. Fortunately for Mr. Hotten, the appearance of this book will not recommend it to persons of taste.

The Songs and Ballads of Cumberland, to which are added Dialect and other Poems. With Biographical Sketches, Notes, and Glossary. Edited by SIDNEY GLPIN. Fcap. 8vo, 7s. Cowan, Carlisle; Routledge & Sons, London.

Undertaken by the editor with a view to provide the public with "a General Collection of the Songs and Ballads of Cumberland, from the time of the first writer in the dialect to the present day," this volume comprises the most noteworthy productions that have appeared during the period. It deserves recognition, and will, doubtless, receive it, beyond the district wherein it was produced, and to which it has especial reference. A book of ballad literature, so peculiarly its own, as this, no other county could yield, and we congratulate the editor on the successful accomplishment of what he has long hoped to effect—an honourable testimonial to the genius of Cumberland.

These songs and ballads are not confined to pieces composed in the dialect of the county, but comprise selections from Cumberland writers, "whether composed in a more northern Doric, or in ordinary English," so that we have some of the most interesting lyrics of Wordsworth, as well as the homely poems of Robert Anderson. Though written, however, by persons of different sexes, and occupying different positions in life, they all possess something in common. A unity may be traced in the variety. The literary culture of one writer is plainly inferior to that of another—John Stagg, the blind fiddler, of Carlisle, and William Wordsworth, of Rydal Mount, differ from each other, as well in the quality as in the degree of their gifts and acquirements—and yet, when the theme is alike, there will be found a resemblance that is surprising. Words and thoughts harmonize. In subject, or treatment, or form, similarity will be discovered. There is a sort of homogeneity even in the prevailing differences. The voices of the different singers vary in point of excellence; but there is the same tone through all. The tunes may be pitched in different keys; but the expression is invariably the same. It is natural to suppose that we should be able to discover in these poems a primitive simplicity, a talk of flocks and herds, of rich meadows, and sunny landscapes, but, strange as it may appear, there is less naturalness than would be anticipated. Strephon, and Chloe, and Daphne, and the Muses, and the Graces play their parts here according to the fashion of the times; and it is evident that the wood notes wild of our provincial poets have been considerably modified by the prevailing taste of the time in which they wrote. But, after all, there is much to admire; they savour of the soil; and the rustic attempt to imitate the manners of the town is as amusing as it is characteristic. The editor has evidently spent considerable labour on his self-imposed task, and appears to have done his work well. Each collection is prefaced with a biographical notice of the poet. Most of these notices are meagre, and defective in style; but some of them derive great interest, from the fact that they have been contributed by the authors of the poems themselves. In the latter case much disingenuousness is displayed. John Woodcock Graves, for instance, tells us that "in stature I am about the middle height, straight, proportionate, and of lithesome gait." But altogether the egotism of the writers is rather agreeable than distasteful. It is the egotism of simple minds. The work contains an "index of first lines" and a "glossary." It will be seen that the latter is supererogatory, when we mention that the editor thinks it necessary to inform his readers that a-bed means in bed; that to brag means to boast; that bran new means quite new; and that chops is provincial for the jaws.

London Poems. By ROBERT BUCHANAN. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. Strahan.

The joys and sorrows of common-place life have found in Mr. Buchanan an eloquent interpreter. This volume of miscellaneous poems contains tales of distress and suffering, admirably told, without any attempt to force upon the reader a foregone moral. The story of "Liz"—the dying soliloquy of a costermonger's paramour—and that of "Jane Lawson," a young woman of Islington, who has listened once too often to the importunities of her suitor, are admirably told, and are highly pathetic. The writer, who proves himself to be a close observer of character, has the unusual and praiseworthy merit of being free from the cant of conventionalism, and treats his subjects from a natural point of view, utterly disdaining the shallow and incomplete morality which usually repels a reader from most of the books of poems that come under his notice. But in saying Mr. Buchanan is eminently sincere and pathetic, we must be not understood to say that we consider him an eminent poet. Were we to estimate him as a poet, by his success in exciting our sympathy, we should rate him very highly; for there is a manliness and a self-confidence in his verse that must command and will obtain respect. But there is no tale in this volume that would not produce in us the same effect, if it had been told in ordinary prose. There is nothing gained, as far as we can see, by the metrical form into which the writer has put his stories. Of poetry—that which remains after all has been told—there is none. The sympathy Mr. Buchanan excited in us would be evoked, and is daily evoked by police reports in the newspapers. Mr. Buchanan has very gracefully and successfully reported certain phases of life; but he has completely failed to do anything more. His genuine honesty has prevented him from seeing falsely; but the poetic faculty, which may be as successfully employed in the exceptional emotions as in the most ordinary and "real," has nowhere displayed itself in these "poems." The use of words immemorially used by poets, and the turning of a phrase in the manner of famous predecessors, do not give a man right to esteem himself a poet; and in every estimate we make of a man's success we must abstract what is due to him for his matter from what is due to him for his manner. Critics are not, however, as we find from the dedication prefixed to the volume, unanimous on this point, so we will not press it.

The Resources and Prospects of America, ascertained during a Visit to the States in the Autumn of 1865 by Sir Morton Peto, Bart., M.P. 8vo, 7s. 6d. Strahan.

Just as the late civil war was brought to a close Sir Morton Peto crossed the Atlantic, and visited the United States of America. As a member of the English parliament, as principal partner of an eminent commercial firm, as one who during the course of the bitter contest out of which they had just emerged, leaned in opinion to the cause that had proved itself triumphant, and, perhaps most of all, as a man who was thought to have it in his power greatly to develop the resources of their country—the English baronet was well received, and warmly welcomed by the Americans. Opportunities of unusual nature were afforded him. The several departments of the government, as well as the municipal and state authorities, placed in his hands documents containing the latest and best information relating to the resources and progress of the country; private friends aided him in his researches; and he himself travelled about, and personally inspected what he desired to make himself acquainted with.

This book is the result. The volume is made up partly of the statistics with which the author had been supplied during his visit, and partly of information derived from his own observation. Sir Morton does not trouble us with personal recollections of the great people (or little people) with whom he came in contact, or give us an elaborate account of national peculiarities, or gossip about the social manners of the Yankees; he eschews even political matters, and strictly confines himself to his subject—the prospects and resources of the country. The work is divided into eight sections, wherein are respectively treated:—Population, Agriculture, Manufactures, Minerals, Commerce, Railroads, the South, and Finance. On each of these topics much valuable information is given; the statistics are marshalled and arranged with much judgment; and the conclusions drawn, though frequently differing from that pronounced by the original compilers, seem to us to be uniformly correct. The author expresses much confidence in the future prospects of the Americans; and if he does not rate their present resources in some departments quite so highly as they themselves, no one who reads the evidence he has adduced will accuse him of unduly depreciating the people, or their capabilities. The work is the most practical that has appeared; and we believe it to be one of the most trustworthy.

Beauties and Wonders of Vegetable Life. (Religious Tract Society.)—From the wayside, the park, the forest, the orchard, the garden, the heath, the field, the palm-house, and the conservatory, the author of this most entertaining volume produces evidences of the fertility and variety of nature. Abundantly illustrated with pictures of trees, flowers, fruits, ferns, heaths, mosses, lichens, herbs, grasses, fungi, etc., the book is one from which all readers, young and old, will gather information and delight; a book, indeed, which will induce many to study botany, who would otherwise have probably neglected that most delightful science.

Field Flowers and City Chimes.—Among the “Manchester Poets” Mr. Bealey deservedly holds a high place; but had he had a judicious friend by his side when he prepared his “Field Flowers and City Chimes” for the printer, he would assuredly have omitted some rather trivial specimens of his muse, which here appear side by side with really excellent and touching poems. For instance, the verses “Mally,” written in the Lancashire dialect, are as true to nature as anything ever penned by Burns; and it is pleasant to believe that in many a humble homestead there exist old couples who can look back to their youth without regret, and console themselves for unsuccess in life by the reflection that love conquers pain, and faith is its own reward: for these, indeed, are the morals we draw from the poems referred to. Printed in old-faced type, with quaint chapter headings and characteristic illustrations, this book of poems will be welcomed by all admirers of the simple and natural life-songs of the people.

Life of John Welsh, Minister of Ayr: including Illustrations of the Contemporary Ecclesiastical History of England and France. By the late Rev. James Young. (Edinburgh: Maclaren, 6s. 6d.) Among the persons whose names are indissolubly connected with the history of the Scottish Reformation, that of John Welsh holds a high place. Successively minister of Selkirk, Kircudbright, and Ayr, in Scotland; and afterwards of Jonsac, Nerac, and St. Jean d'Angely, in France, John Welsh did valiant battle with the Papacy for a long series of years. Various memoirs of him have from time to time appeared, but not one so full and satisfactory as the present. Writing to the author, in 1862, from his hermitage in Chelsea, Thomas Carlyle says:—“Welsh's biography, if it could be made conclusively intelligible, as at least the public Church History of his time, could, by right pains, might be a very acceptable book; the Anti-Presbyterian procedure of King James, and scenes one has seen of ‘all the women gathered weeping on Leith sands,’ I think at two in the morning, ‘as Welsh and consorts lifted anchor for exile,’ &c., &c., represent a vivid state of things in what has now fallen altogether blank to common Scotch readers.” Such an “acceptable book” is that of the late Mr. Young, now edited, with various explanatory notes, and a biographical sketch of the author, by the Rev. James Anderson, himself a writer of no mean power, principally known as the author of the “Ladies of the Covenant.” Mr. Young, who died only a year since, left his book so far complete as to have even written its preface; but on his death-bed he requested his friend David Laing, the editor of the “Works of John Knox,” to revise the proof. His request was complied with, and the double duty of revision and editing seem to have been well performed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

UNJUST DEALING.

To the Editor of THE BOOKSELLER.

SIR,—A few days back I ordered through a London wholesale house some dozens of Combe's “Ready Writer” Copy Books, published by Longmans', and are supplied (according to the prospectus they issued with the specimens) at 3d. each, to schools 2s. per dozen; but this wholesale house charges me 2s. 3d. per dozen, besides their commission, for cash.

It appears that the schoolmasters are favoured with books and school material at a much less price than the trade. The above is not the only example, as I have proved in many cases that even the public (the clergy in particular) are supplied at a cheaper rate than the hard struggling bookseller of the present day.

It is high time that the country bookseller should awake out of sleep, and search for the rules of the booksellers of “ye olden time,” and study to act up to them, to make and leave such fortunes as they made; and not run themselves headlong into bankruptcy and poverty, by letting others run away with their profits, and feed upon their weakness.

I, for one, will stand up for my right, and gain it honestly; remaining,

Yours, truly,

Wangford

HENRY W. BOYCE.

AN EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of THE BOOKSELLER.

SIR,—Having reference to my letter published in your journal issued on the 29th of September, I desire it to be known that, on reconsideration, I have determined to abandon my intention to aid in any way in the establishment of an auction business, in connection with books or remainders.

On the sale to Mr. Sotheran, my late partner, of all my interest in the bookselling business, as carried on by us in the Strand and elsewhere, I covenanted, within certain limits, not to be concerned in the same business, either wholesale or retail; and as my lending aid and assistance to my son and his partner, in the business of book auctioneers, is considered by Mr. Sotheran likely to prove injurious to him, I have come to the above determination.

Your inserting this notice in your forthcoming number will oblige

Your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WILLIS,

Hampstead, Oct. 24, 1866.

PROSPECTS OF THE SEASON.

WE have been at some pains in getting together the titles of those books likely to appear during the season 1866-67. The list is a goodly one in point of length, but we believe that a careful perusal of it will shew that at least as much credit is due to publishers as to authors, most of the books, of any importance, bearing evidence of their paternity. We are aware that this will not be regarded as the highest kind of praise, but as no one better than a publisher can tell what the requirements of the public are, so no one can better provide for them. From this point of view it will be seen that the provision is ample. Every class of readers will find just those books which they have long felt the want of. Art, Science, Poetry, History, Biography, Travel, all have been thought of, nothing has been left undone, no want unsupplied, at least till we next year provide a list equally long, and then we may wonder how the gap remained open so long.

ILLUSTRATIONS of the LIFE and WRITINGS of WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. By J. O. Halliwell, Esq., F.R.S. In folio volumes, at four guineas each, to subscribers only.

Mr. Halliwell, in his prospectus, says:—"It is proposed in a series of folio volumes to accumulate a collection of materials illustrative of the details of Shakespeare's Life and Works, in which, amongst other matters, the Stratford-on-Avon, the London, and the England of the Poet's day will be attempted to be interpreted by the aid of contemporary documents and books, and by an elaborate system of truthful artistic illustration. The public will, I hope, enable me to do this. It is of no use at all commencing the work, unless these ideas can be carried out with ample means and on a liberal scale of expenditure. I can fortunately afford to work at these grateful studies without the prospect of remuneration, but not to incur the loss of the many thousand pounds an inadequate subscription list would here entail; and works of this kind, unless one is prepared to sustain an excessive pecuniary loss, can only be printed by subscription. My materials will be purposely arranged in a disconnected form. Thus, an account of Anne Hathaway's Cottage may be followed by notes on Hamlet, and so on; the object of this being that the work could be relinquished at any time without being rendered imperfect. A second title, not marked as for a series, will be furnished with the first volume, so that whether ten volumes are issued, or only one, the work will yet be a complete one in itself. It is impossible, at present, to give the names of all the artists who will probably be engaged on the illustrations to this work, or to make any positive statements on the subject, but I believe I can mention, with tolerable certainty, that most of the engravings of objects at Stratford will be executed by T. J. Blight, Esq., the accomplished and well-known archaeological draughtsman of Renzance; that many of the old seals, coins, and miscellaneous antiquities, will be delineated by a pencil unrivalled in those departments of art, that of my old and respected friend, (the late) F. W. Fairholt, Esq., F.S.A., and that the facsimiles will be confided to the accurate pen of E. W. Ashbee, Esq."

MEMOIR of the late MAJOR-GENERAL WHEELER, formerly of the Bengal Army.

"General Wheeler's name is well known in India. For nearly fifty years he was in the H. E. I. Co's service, and for the greater part of that time, he laboured for the conversion of the natives, and for the spiritual welfare of the British soldiery. His efforts for the conversion of the heathen would bear comparison with those of many a missionary; and in some instances they were put forth at the peril of his life. His liberality was as remarkable as was his religious zeal. At one time he contemplated giving a thousand pounds per month, to promote religious and benevolent objects; and after the Delhi famine, he took under his own charge 150 native orphans. He served in a military capacity, under thirteen different Commanders-in-Chief."

THE ANGLICAN MISSAL: the Holy Communion, with the Collects to be used throughout the Year. Being an attempt to restore the Ancient Art of Illumination to its legitimate place in the sacred service of the Church.

The publisher, in his advertisement, says:—"The walls of our Sanctuaries again glow with colour; our altars and vestments are adorned with costly embroidery. But what must we say of our Books of Office, on which Churchmen of olden time were wont to expend so much pious labour? At present the Church of England has no edition of the Divine Liturgy susceptible of the Illuminator's Art. It is believed that many who have of late years acquired skill in Illumination will gladly dedicate their talent to the service of the Altar, if facilities be afforded them by the publication of books for this purpose. To such the Designer of the Anglican Missal submits the results of his leisure hours for some months."

"ESSAYS on SYMBOLISM." By Dr. Barlow, the Dunsoplist.

In this little volume the author endeavours to give a scientific character to symbolism, by tracing it up to first principles in the theologies of ancient India, Egypt, China, etc. The essay "on the Ark's History of the Tree of Life," exhibits the intimate connexion of the Christian doctrine of immortality, with that of the Egyptian as exhibited in the "Tree," which is the symbolical support of everlasting life. In the concluding portion of the work, it is attempted to show that neither the dogmas, nor the doctrinal obscurities of christianity, are peculiar to it, but occur in other formal religious systems, and pertain to ideal conceptions and their symbolical manifestations,
more or less prevalent among mankind in general.

LIBRARIES BOUGHT.

Executors or gentlemen having for SALE
LIBRARIES of BOOKS either large or small, in town or country, or wishing to exchange the same for others, are respectfully reminded by the advertisers, who have been long known as the most extensive purchasers and sellers of books of every class in London, how much more advantageous it is for them to dispose of their property by private arrangement rather than trust it to the risks of a sale by auction. WILLIS and SOTHERAN are not only ready at all times to give the highest prices for books, but they save the seller the delays and losses frequently arising from sales by auction, for it is notorious that, in addition to the large expenses attending the latter mode, property, unless sold at particular seasons, is often unduly sacrificed. They also value, catalogue, arrange, and renovate libraries either in town or country.—WILLIS & SOTHERAN, booksellers, 136, Strand, near Waterloo Bridge.

THE
OBERLAND and its GLACIERS,

EXPLORED AND ILLUSTRATED WITH ICE-AXE AND CAMERA.

BY H. B. GEORGE, M.A., F.R.G.S.,

Fellow of New College, Oxford, Editor of the "Alpine Journal."

WITH

TWENTY-EIGHT PHOTOGRAPHS,

Illustrative of the various Glacial Phenomena, and of the Scenery described,

BY

ERNEST EDWARDS, B.A.

AND A MAP OF THE OBERLAND.

"In this volume Mr. George has presented an agreeable and handsomely embellished drawing-room book. The photographs are excellent. Glacier scenery is peculiarly suited for photographic representation, as it displays no great variety of colours, and the contrasts of light and shade are strong on tolerably fine days."—Athenæum.

"The combination of the ice-axe and camera referred to in the title-page took place in the persons of Mr. H. B. George, an experienced and accomplished mountaineer, and that excellent photographer, Mr. Ernest Edwards. . . . We have here a clear and very complete summary of glacier phenomena, and of the explanations of them propounded by scientific men. The interest of Mr. George's lucid exposition is greatly enhanced by the illustrations of Mr. Edwards. They are always beautiful, and often exceedingly instructive."—Saturday Review.

"Mr. Edwards is an excellent photographer, and his work, much of it done under serious difficulties, is admirably executed, the photographs far surpassing the average of photographic book illustrations. . . . They are well printed, and neatly mounted on toned paper similar to that on which the book is printed. The whole is beautifully printed and bound, and forms one of the most handsome quarto volumes we have seen for some time."—Photographic News

"We have the Oberland Glaciers brought home to us with all their most characteristic details. . . . Among volumes illustrated by photography, we must rank this work as the chief. . . . Points of view have been chosen with equal eye for the picturesque, and for the requirements of the student."—Examiner.

"No artist's pencil could have portrayed these icy regions with such fidelity as has here been attained by means of the photographer's camera."—Morning Post.

"The photographic illustrations in this volume are unique. The representations of 'Dirt Cones,' 'Glacietables,' 'Ice-needles,' 'Active and Extinct Moulins,' and various other glacial specialités, given with all the truth of reality, are perfect. . . . Mr. George does his best to render the theory of glaciers intelligible to the meanest capacity, and he makes things pleasant by quoting a great deal of poetry of a decidedly romantic description. Accordingly, we accept his lucid though brief theoretical disquisition with much gratitude, and follow him with pleasure through the more practical parts of his book."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"It is a very beautiful book, excellently well written, with a large amount of information, and will, we hope, become a general favourite. It has also a good map."—Literary Churchman.

"Mr. George has been so happy as to produce the best popular exposition yet of the glacial theory, so largely verified, advanced, and enriched by Dr. Tyndall. . . . The photographs are altogether surprising for truth of general effect and for minute fidelity."—Nonconformist.

"Mr. George and his photographic companion, Mr. Edwards, deserve the greatest credit for producing this attractive volume."—London Review.

"The book is a monument of their success."—Spectator.

"Not only as a narrative of adventure, but also as an intelligent guide-book, we commend the 'Oberland and its Glaciers' as a work to be read for the interest which attaches to its matter, and to be looked at for the beauty of its photographic illustrations."—Art Journal.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT'S

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF NEW WORKS.

Vol. II. of the Life of Josiah Wedgwood. From his Private Correspondence and Family Papers. By ELIZA METEYARD. Dedicated to the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE. 8vo. Price 2ls. bound (now ready). This Volume (Completing the Work) is embellished with above 200 beautiful illustrations.

"We have to congratulate the authoress on the publication of her second volume of the 'Life of Josiah Wedgwood.' We can award her the praise due to the most painstaking and conscientious application. She has devoted her whole mind and energy to her subject, and has achieved a work not less creditable to herself than it is indispensable to all who wish to know anything about English ceramic art, and its great inventor. The two volumes before us are in themselves marvels of decorative and typographic skill. More beautifully printed pages, more creamy paper, and more dainty woodcuts have seldom met our eyes."—Saturday Review.

THE CHRISTMAS GIFT-BOOK, 1866.

"This will probably be the most superb volume ever published."—Athenæum, Sept. 22, 1866.

"It has about it all the essential elements for success in precisely this very kind of enterprise—viz., adventurous publishers, skilled engravers, a gifted artist, and a poet whose verses are suggestive of what we doubt not they will receive from Gustave Doré's facile hand, superbly imaginative embellishments."—Sun, Sept. 21.

On December 1st, 1866, will be published in imperial 4to, with paper and type made expressly for the Work, and in elegant cloth, price 21s.;

Illustrated with Photographs in lieu of engravings, £2 2s.; Artists' Proofs, £5 5s.

"ELAINE" BY ALFRED TENNYSON,
Illustrated by GUSTAVE DORÉ

With NINE exquisite full page DRAWINGS, engraved on STEEL, in the first style of art, by HOLL, BAKER, JEENS, ROBINSON, and others.

Monsieur Doré's own Opinion of the Engravings.—"Paris, October 24, 1866.—Nous aurons fait un très beau livre, un livre unique. Veuillez donc complimenter de ma part les artistes qui m'interprètent si bien."

The designs of this Artist have never yet been engraved on steel, and consequently have never been interpreted in their fullest sense. M. Doré has made these drawings with special reference to this mode of engraving, and it was at his earnest request that the Publishers determined to incur the great outlay necessary to produce this book. It is, too, the first time that M. Doré has illustrated the works of a contemporary author, and, to use his own words, he desires the work

"TO BE A MONUMENT TO MR. TENNYSON AND TO HIS OWN POWERS."

"Mon frère a fait cette fois-ci le grand succès qui fera descendre son nom à la postérité."—ERNEST DORÉ.

From the Times review of three columns.

"It is not fair on the part of a reviewer to pick the plums out of an author's book, thus filching away his cream, and leaving little but skim milk remaining; but, even if we were ever so maliciously inclined, we could not, in the present instance, pick out all Messrs. Larwood and Hotten's plums, because the good things are so numerous as to defy the most wholesale depredation."

RE-ISSUE OF MR. SWINBURNE'S POEMS.

This Day, fcap. 8vo, pages 340, price 9s.

Poems and Ballads. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

RECENT OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Wherever there is any kind of true genius, we have no right to drive it mad by ridicule or invective. We must deal with it wisely, justly, fairly. Some of the passages which have been selected as evidence of (the poet's) plain speaking have been wantonly misunderstood. The volume as a whole is neither profane nor indecent. A little more clothing in our uncertain climate might perhaps have been attended with advantage. . . . To us this volume for the first time conclusively settles that Mr. Swinburne is not a mere brilliant rhetorician or melodious twanger of another man's lyre, but authentically a poet."—Fraser's Magazine, Nov. 1866.

"The theatre of Mr. Swinburne is co-extensive with his knowledge and experience. It will expand, and there is no fear of his being denied an audience, or crushed by a critique. He is more likely to realize the boast of Nelson who, finding himself unmentioned in the 'Gazette,' declared a day would come when he should have one to himself. We are not in the secret of his own defence, or his re-appearance. He may or may not withdraw poems which have been impregnated by designing criticism with a pruriency which was not their own."—Reader.

"There is enough in this volume to have made the fortune of most members of his craft."—The Scotsman.

"The critics seem to be agreed in seizing upon what deserves reprobation, without noticing what deserves respect. In this way he has been either very blindly or very unfairly dealt with."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The outcry that has been made over his last published volume of 'Poems and Ballads' is not very creditable to his critics. . . . Old Testament poetry has fastened upon his imagination quite as strongly as the sublime fatalism of the old Greek dramatists. . . . There is a terrible earnestness about these books. . . . That a book thus dealing with the desire of the flesh should have been denounced as profligate because it does not paint the outside of the Sodom's apple of like colour of the ashes that it shows within, says little indeed for the thoroughness of current criticism."—Examiner.

MR. SWINBURNE'S REPLY TO HIS CRITICS.

This Day, demy 8vo, price 1s.

Notes, and Poems, and Reviews. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

From the Examiner.

"Mr. Swinburne here speaks for himself without personality of any kind, but with much general expression of scorn, which the small critics have fairly drawn down on themselves. It is to be regretted that a young poet from whom much is to be hoped should be thus forced into explanations that can only humiliate those by whom they were required."

This Day, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price 7s.

THE ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MOORE,

WITH AN ORIGINAL MEMOIR BY JOHN FRANCIS WALLER, LL.D.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the Belfast Morning News.

" The present edition of his works is the most splendid we have seen. . . . It is printed on beautiful toned paper, in fine type, and will make one of the finest volumes recently issued from the press. . . . For those who want the most beautiful poetry in the language, got out in a manner worthy of its style and sentiment, this is the work."

From Saunders' News Letter, Dublin.

" We welcome this edition of the works of our greatest Irish poet with all the warmth and appreciation to which it is entitled."

From the Northern Daily Express, Newcastle.

" The edition at once promises to do justice to the exquisite productions of the Irish poet, and to be worthy in every respect of this well-known firm."

From the Liverpool Daily Post.

" Moore has been published in many shapes and editions, each vying with the rest in beauty and taste; but the resources of adornment have not yet been exhausted, for we have now before us a new illustrated edition published by Mr. William Mackenzie, which bids fair to surpass all its predecessors. . . . The illustrations all through, which are on wood and steel, are finished in a style that may be pronounced exquisite. To those who desire to have a copy of Moore, combining convenience and cheapness with finished elegance, we can recommend that now being issued by Mr. Mackenzie."

From the Birmingham Daily Gazette.

" This edition ought to have a large circulation, for it richly deserves it. The publisher has done everything to make it an edition de luxe, while the price and the mode of publication place it within the reach of all the lovers of the poet."

From the Caledonian Mercury, Edinburgh.

" Mr. Mackenzie made the middle classes of the three kingdoms his debtors by his delightful edition of Burns. Appealing to the same class, he here offers them a companion edition of Moore, to our thinking decidedly finer in its get-up and illustration than Burns. We are sure he will not appeal in vain, but the appetite and taste, whetted and excited by one great national song-writer, will serve as an inducement to add another to the precious gods of the household."

From the Glasgow Herald.

" Mr. Mackenzie is about to produce an edition of Moore, which all lovers of art and all lovers of Moore will appreciate; for it will be second to none of the 'elegant editions' of the Irish bard yet published."

From the Northern Whig, Belfast.

" The first number of this new edition makes liberal promise of being as handsome a drawing-room edition of Moore as could be desired within a moderate limit of cost. The rich, warmly-tinted paper, clear type, and profusely numerous illustrations—many of really high merit—are worthy of Moore's fame and memory. The publisher seems to have spared no cost, and the printer no pains, in their successful attempt to produce a really superb edition of the works of Ireland's great national poet."

From the Freeman's Journal, Dublin.

" The style in which the volume is being got out, so far as illustrations, paper, and type are concerned, is simply exquisite, and cannot fail to render it an universal favourite in this country especially."

From the Liverpool Mercury.

"Tom Moore is a favourite with all lovers of poetry in however humble a guise he may appear, but to those who delight in good paper, good printing, and good illustrations, Mr. Mackenzie's new edition of the poet's works will be particularly acceptable. . . . To any library it would be an ornament."

From the Dundee Advertiser.

"This is a magnificent edition of the works of Moore. The illustrations are numerous and very fine, the paper is toned, and the letterpress is all that could possibly be desired. Moore's poetry is not so well known as it should be, and his songs form a mine of poetical and musical beauty. The present work will rival all the former editions of the poet's works we have hitherto seen."

From the Newcastle Daily Chronicle.

" The many admirers of Moore will learn with pleasure that what promises to be a most complete and handsome edition of his works is now in course of publication by Mr. Mackenzie."

From the Inverness Courier.

" The portrait is from Richmond's crayon sketch, and we can vouch for its likeness, having a very vivid recollection of the joyous upturned face of the little poet as he sat one evening listening to a gentleman singing one of his songs."

From the Banner of Ulster, Belfast.

" The work itself will contain an original and well-written memoir of the poet from the pen of Dr. Waller. We are sure that the demand for the book will be very great, and that many will purchase it as a suitable souvenir of our great Irish bard, who has been beautifully and truthfully described by Byron as the 'poet of all circles, and the idol of his own.'"

From the Shields Daily News.

" And to complete the liberality of the publisher, each subscriber will receive a large and magnificent portrait of the illustrious Bard, suitable for framing. To all lovers of genius, to all admirers of the beautiful, we cordially recommend this exquisite edition of Mackenzie's 'Illustrated Family Moore.'"

From the Glasgow Free Press.

" On a future occasion, we shall take the liberty of again noticing this edition of Moore, and of going more fully into its merits; meantime let our readers see it to be their interest to procure this splendid copy of their national bard."

From the Belfast News Letter.

" 'The Illustrated Family Moore' will be one of the handsomest works ever issued from the press, and will, we are confident, at once find its way to the homes of tens of thousands where the songs of the Irish bard are truly 'household words.'"

From the North British Daily Mail, Glasgow.

" We have no hesitation in saying the edition will be one of the best drawing-room ones to be obtained of the works of the great Irish bard."

From the Irish Times, Dublin.

" Printed on paper of the finest texture and the most agreeable tint, the lyrics of Moore could not possibly be more daintily or more fitly presented to the public."

From the Carlisle Standard.

" Such a work would grace any parlour or drawing-room table, and would have few compeers on the shelves of a library."

From the Evening Citizen, Glasgow.

"We doubt whether the bard of 'Lalla Rookh' and the 'Irish Melodies' was ever presented to his admirers in a more beautiful and fascinating dress than that which he here wears."

From the Ulster Observer.

"The splendid edition of the works of Ireland's national poet (including the Irish Melodies, Lalla Rookh, National Airs, Legendary Ballads, Songs, &c.) just now in course of publication by Mackenzie, of London, should have a place in every Irish household."
